THE LATEST.

Harry Thaw's attorneys yesterday filed their response to the suggestion of District Attorney Jerome that Thaw is a subject for a commission in lunacy. They assert their belief that the defendant is sane, and supplement their own affidavits with those of the medical experts who have testified in Thaw's behalf. An affidavit from Mrs. William Thaw, mother of the defendant, is also submitted. The principal statement is by Mr. Delmas. He attaches a score or more of letters and notes he has received from Thaw during the progress of the trial. These writings of the defendant, Mr. Delmas declares, clearly indicate his grasp of the proceedings and have contained from time to time valuable suggestions as to the course of the defense.

Thirty-nine Congressmen who have made a visit of inspection to the Panama canal have arrived at New York on board the steamer Panama, from Colon. The party left New York for their tour of inspection on March 6 and arrived at Colon on the 12th. They spent five days in the canal zone, and during that time examined the work. Members of the party expressed themselves as favorably impressed with what they saw.

Immediately after the news of the assassination in Morocco City of Dr. Mauchamp, a French subject, was received at Paris, the French armored cruiser Jeanne d'Arc was ordered back to Tangier, where the commander of the cruiser will find orders awaiting him. If the first reports of the character of the assault upon Dr. Mauchamp are substituted it is certain that France will demand heavy reparation of the Moroccan Government.

By the joint decision of Chancellors Miller and Kirby yesterday the Democrats of Louisville and Jefferson county were given practically a clean sweep of the offices. The magistrate and two constables are lost, no election being declared in the case of the magistrate and one constable. One Fusionist constable is allowed to pull through. The Fusionists are preparing to carry the contest cases to the Court of Appeals without delay.

DEMOCRATS WIN DECISIVE VICTORY IN THE CONTEST CASES

Chancellors Decide For All But One Magistrate and Two Constables.

Irregularities Must Affect Result to Nullify Election.

Charges of Conspiracy On Both Sides Not Sustained.

None of Contestees Had Knowledge of Misdeeds.

Assaults and Thefts of Ballots Strongly Condemned.

Fusionists To Carry Case To Court of Appeals.

REHEARING IS NOT ASKED.

The decision of the long-pending election contests, returned concurrently yesterday at joint session by Chancery Judges Shackelford Miller and Samuel R. Kirby, declares in favor of all the Democratic officeholders, with but three minor exceptions, and brings to an end so far as the local courts are concerned one of the most remarkable pieces of litigation ever heard in Kentucky. In a wonderfully clear and concise opinion covering 180 pages of vinding opinion covering 180 pages of legal cap the Chancellors go to the root of the important questions submitted to them and from the great mass of testimony and stacks of authorities and citations with which they have been assailed by first one side and then the other during the past sixteen months they have carefully winnowed the chaff from the wheat and brought forth from the irrelevant and the confusion the real facts of the case.

Every contention of the Fusionists was allowed its full weight and credit as to fraud, violence and false impersonation of voters so far as a liberal construction of the law and the authorities would admit, and yet they fall short by a decisive number of votes of what they asserted was their just due. Under the cold light of reason as applied by the court to the record, many sensational though flimsy allegations brought by them appear in their true form and may be easily recognized for what they are worth.

Censure For Democrats.

However, offending Democrats are unsparingly handled by the court for the gross frauds committed in the election. On account of many wrongful acts thirteen precincts, under the ruling of the court, are removed bodily from the reckoning. The official majorities yielded by them in favor of the Democratic contestees are subtracted from their total majorities. Every known rule at law relative to how far such frauds can go toward tainting and nullifying the real result of an election is applied to a discussion of these figures.

However, the cases of the Fusionists, while big with charges and assertions, fail to make good with an actual measurement of the facts. For instance, in the Scholl-Bell suit over the office of Sheriff (and the Wilson-Peter suit involving the county judgeship, which were the test actions because they covered the whole county) Scholl's total uncontested vote plus all the contested vote irrespective of whether it might have been properly cast for the Demo-

The election day history of twenty-four precincts is declared in the opinion to be the gist of the contest.

The Fusionists sought to have all precincts where violence was committed eliminated. However, it was found by the Chancellors that the violence in no instance warranted a disfranchisement of the precincts because it did not constitute a sufficient interruption to the progress of the election. It is pointed out that the authorities all hold that an affray at an election does not of itself render an election void. It is only when it is of sufficient duration to cause a serious interference with the balloting that nullification ensues. In none of the instances of violence cited was the interruption of any very great duration and for the most part the balloting proceeded quietly.

Spectacular Put Aside.

In speaking of a raid upon the polls by hoodlums in the so-called Gip Berry precinct the opinion says:

"While these things inflamed the mind and properly aroused great indignation they are apt to withdraw the mind from a consideration of the material facts which should be controlling. It is our judicial duty to discard the spectacular and the irrelevant and give effect to the material and pertinent— to separate the color from the substance. It is observed by the court that even though this precinct and the one considered, known as the Andy Miller precinct, were thrown out, the result of the election would not have been changed." In considering the Andy Miller precinct the opinion says: "The vicious and frenzied assaults upon the Republican election officers committed by Frank Johnson, John Cochran and others in the early morning of the election, were gross and heinous and difficult to understand." Miller is later declared to have acted like a crazy man or like a person under the influence of liquor or a drug.

Considering the question of majority further and applying the rules as laid down by the Court of Appeals of Kentucky, which are to the effect that while it is proper to throw out disfranchised precincts, but not proper to count them for someone else, the opinion calls attention to the fact that Miller's majority in the nine nullified precincts of the Twelfth ward comes to 1,785. This subtracted from 4,383, his official majority, gives him a majority of 2,598. A further reduction of 642 votes in the four remaining disfranchised precincts leaves him a net majority of 1,956. The same principle applied in the County Judges race gives Judge Wilson a net majority of 1,142.

Three Democrats Lose Out.

One Magistrate and two Constables of the Democratic officeholders lose under the decision of the Chancellors. They are Magistrate P. T. Sullivan, in whose district are the nine thrown out precincts, and Constables J. C. Hendricks, Thomas Moran, Jeff Cochran, Joseph T. Short.

STUDENT THOUGHT TO HAVE KILLED HIMSELF

LETTER FROM HERBERT McDAVID SPEAKS OF CANAL.

YOUNG MAN MISSING SINCE LAST FRIDAY MORNING.

FRIENDS PROSECUTE SEARCH.

Friends of Herbert McDavid, a business college student from Rosedale, Carter county, who disappeared from his boarding-house, at 112 West Chestnut street, Friday morning, fear that he has taken his life by jumping into the river. The theory is arrived at from the fact that yesterday morning John Hubbard, his roommate, received a letter from him telling him that he proposed to jump into the canal. The letter was posted in Louisville, and Hubbard immediately began to make investigations with a view to finding where McDavid now is, but all his efforts were unsuccessful. The letter spoke of sundry troubles that he had prior to his disappearance, and ended with the words, "Au revoir; me for the canal."

Hubbard said that he and McDavid came from Rosedale last November in order to attend a local business college, and since that time they have roomed together. On March 9 McDavid, for some unknown reason, quit his attendance at school. Since that time, Hubbard said, McDavid had brooded a good deal, but had never indicated that he was going to take his life last Friday morning, when he wrote him the letter.

Hubbard said that there were two reasons for McDavid's despondency. One, he said, was that he was in love with a young woman living in Grayson county, but had not heard from her for some time, although he had written to her repeatedly. The other, he said, was that the missing youth was without funds. As far as he knew, Hubbard said, McDavid was penniless when he left home.

McDavid, according to Hubbard, arose at 6 o'clock Friday morning, and after dressing himself and putting his room in order, without saying a word as to where he was going or why. When McDavid did not return his roommate immediately began to hunt for him. He inquired in the neighborhood and among friends as to whether they had seen or heard of McDavid, but all his inquiries elicited no information whatever.

McDavid is twenty years of age and is a native of Rosedale, Carter county. He is the son of William McDavid, a farmer of Carter county.

BROTHERS SENTENCED TO STATE PENITENTIARY.

Lancaster, March 23.—[Special.]—John and James Simpson were given a sentence of twenty-one years at this term of court for the murder of Bud Casey last October near Buckeye in this county. The two Simpsons will remain here in jail to be tried at the next term of court for killing Nathan Taylor at the same time and place that Casey met his death. Curtis Post, indicted jointly with the Simpson men and charged with complicity in the double murder, was not ready for trial and his case is postponed till the next term.

RAILROAD SHOPS TIED UP BY STRIKE.

Somerset, Ky., March 23.—[Special.]—Union men at work in the Q. and C. shops here walked out at noon because the company failed to discharge non-union workmen. The blacksmiths and machinists are still at work, but the roundhouse men and shop helpers all quit. Over 200 men stopped work and the shop is tied up completely.

ONE THOUSAND ILL FROM EATING HASH

VETERANS IN SOLDIERS' HOME POISONED BY PTOMAINES.

HOSPITAL FULL SOON AFTER MEN EAT BREAKFAST.

EVERY ONE SOON RECOVERS.

Leavenworth, Kan., March 23.—More than 1,000 veterans at the National Soldiers' Home here are suffering from ptomaine poisoning, the result of eating meat hash at breakfast this morning. No deaths were reported up to a late hour to-day. The first symptoms of trouble were manifested several hours after breakfast. Soon the home hospital was crowded with sick veterans, and the ambulances were rushing in from the barracks with loads of them. There was an apparent effort on the part of the officers to suppress the real condition of affairs, which did not become known until this afternoon.

No One Seriously Ill.

Kansas City, March 23.—In a telephone conversation with the Associated Press this afternoon an officer in charge of the hospital at the Soldiers' Home at Leavenworth, Kan., stated that none of the veterans were seriously ill; that most of them had been discharged after a slight treatment, and that there was no likelihood of any death occurring from the ptomaine poisoning. Most of those afflicted, he said, simply suffered slight vomiting spells.

INDEPENDENT GROWERS

FORM ORGANIZATION IN CALDWELL COUNTY.

Will Pool 1907 Tobacco Not Pledged To Protective Association.

Princeton, Ky., March 23.—[Special.]—At a meeting of the independent tobacco growers of Caldwell county at this place to-day a stemmy association branch of the American Society of Equity was organized by the appointment of a soliciting committee, composed of prominent Caldwell county farmers. The object of the stemmy association is to organize the independent tobacco growers for the purpose of pooling the tobacco of 1907, not pledged to the Dark Tobacco Protective Association.

The organization of the stemmy association will not effect the Dark Tobacco Protective Association and as a result a general good feeling among the farmers seems to exist, and it is now predicted that the entire crop of 1907 tobacco will be controlled by the Society of Equity and Dark Tobacco Protective Association. Already there is talk of a large joint storage building and stemmy house being erected here before fall. The Dark Tobacco Protective Association will hold a meeting in this city next Saturday, and another meeting of the stemmy association will be held Saturday, April 6.

GOVERNOR WILL FIX DAY ON WHICH NEGRO HANGS.

Frankfort, Ky., March 23.—[Special.]—The matter of the date of the hanging in the case of Ed Brown, colored, of Louisville, sentenced to be hanged for murder, was made up at the office of the clerk of the Court of Appeals to-day and sent to the State Executive Department for the fixing of a day for the execution, the petition for a rehearing of the case having been overruled.

Brown was convicted of the murder of one Hallie Edwards, also colored. The crime was committed in July, 1904, in a house at 840 Baxter avenue in Louisville. The case has been pending here for some time on petition for rehearing.

Young Wife Dead.

Georgetown, Ky., March 23.—[Special.]—The funeral services of Mrs. Mary Smith, wife of Gayle Smith, were held this afternoon at the Baptist church and burial at Georgetown cemetery. She was only nineteen years of age and had been married about one year. She resided two miles out from town on Payne's Depot pike. She is survived by a son two weeks old.

WELCOME BRYCE

Pilgrim Society Honors Him As Guest.

NEW BRITISH AMBASSADOR WELL PLEASED.

LESS OF "HANDS ACROSS THE SEA" ORATORY.

CHOATE OPENS LOVE FEAST.

New York, March 23.—James Bryce, British Ambassador at Washington, made his first official appearance before an American audience as the guest of the Pilgrim Society, at a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The gathering was notable, both in point of speakers and in the character of the speechmaking. There was less perhaps of what Joseph Choate, in opening the "International love feast," described as "hands across the sea" oratory, than is usually heard at a Pilgrim dinner, and a tendency to pay personal tributes to the statesman-amateur who many years ago made the acquaintance of Americans and candidly set forth his impressions in print.

In proposing the health of the Ambassador, Mr. Choate said among other things:

Bryce's Qualifications.

"It is the supreme fitness of an

I take this opportunity to put in writing what I said to the gentlemen who were under treatment at the James Sanatorium when I visited that institution on the 18th ultimo, bringing a friend of mine for treatment, viz.: That I was for twenty years a first-class booze killer, and was foolish enough to believe that instead of whisky injuring me it, to a certain extent, was a benefit. I thought it whetted my ideas and gave me more energy and better fitted me to wrestle with the problems of life; but, oh, how

MANUAL PLEASED WITH ITS NEW CHAPEL

Each of the Students of Upper Classes To Speak Once Each Term.

The week just passed has been an important one in the history of the Manual Training School. It has witnessed the realization of a hope long deferred in the heart of every Manual student and member of the faculty. The new chapel has been dedicated and opened for the daily use of the students. For four years the Manual has been without adequate chapel facilities, and for three of these years they have had no place within the walls of this institution where they could all get together to give vent to their enthusiasm.

On the opening day, the Manual orchestra furnished the music. Principal E. P. Chapin reviewed the history of Manual's chapel, and pointed out the many advantages to be derived from meetings of the student body and the various student organizations. It brings to every student increased opportunities, he said, and with these opportunities come increased responsibilities. There comes a great obligation to each boy to return much to his city, State and nation in worthy service for the blessings of education they have made possible.

Prof. F. F. Thwing, who has been with the Manual ever since it first began, his sessions at Brook and Oak streets, was to have given an address, but through illness was unable to do so. Dr. B. L. Jones, of the English department, then gave an outline of the plans for public speaking. Every member of the Junior and senior classes is to speak in chapel before the 60 students, at least once each term. Once each month the chapel exercises will consist of a debate upon some life topic arranged between the two sections of the senior class. On Thursday morning, J. W. Guhrman, of the Junior class, gave an original oration on "Ideals of a High School Student." The oration was well composed, and its delivery met with the hearty approval of the students.

PRIMITIVE BED QUILTS FOR BOONESBORO FORT.

Will Be Placed On Rude Beds To Show How First Settlers Slept.

Frankfort, Ky., March 23.—[Special.]—Col. C. E. Hoge, one of the commissioners for the Kentucky Jamestown Exposition, returned to-day from Berea, where he went to purchase a number of old quilts, bedspreads, etc., woven in the primitive pattern of Kentucky, early days, which will be placed on the rude beds to be placed in the log huts in Boonesboro fort, Kentucky, building at the Jamestown Exposition. The old quilts were property of Mrs. Edgar Lester Hill, representative of the industrial department of Berea College, and some of the articles are said to be as old as the State itself. Mrs. Hill refused to sell a number of them, but loaned them for exhibition purposes, stipulating that they must be returned to her when the Exposition is over.

Run Over By Ore Train.

Owingsville, Ky., March 23.—[Special.]—At the ore mines five miles from here, a train of ore bogies ran off the track, knocking James Section down, running over him and crushing his right leg, which will have to be amputated to save his life.

WARM WELCOME

Extended By France to American Ambassador.

TRADITIONAL POMP MARKS FORMAL INSTALLATION.

HENRY WHITE PRESENTS HIS LETTERS TO PRESIDENT.

FALLIERES PROMISES SUPPORT

Paris, March 23.—Henry White, the new Ambassador of the United States to France, inaugurated his mission this afternoon under peculiarly propitious auspices. President Fallieres, in quite an unusual speech of welcome, expressed frankly his gratification over the new American Ambassador.

The ceremony of the presentation of Mr. White's letters was conducted with the traditional pomp marking such occasions. A squadron of cuirassiers and a troop of cavalry escorted the American Ambassador, who, accompanied by the French Ambassador, M. Pichon, introduced Mr. White, who was greeted cordially. In presenting his letters, Mr. White spoke of his many visits to France, dating from childhood, his love for the country and the peculiar pleasures with which he now resumed the duties of his Government to preserve and strengthen the bonds and enduring ties between the two nations.

"France and the United States," said Mr. White, "representing one in the old and the other in the new world, the noblest aspirations of man, a dash dedicated to their realization by its methods, would have failed in their high missions and betrayed the trusts they assumed had they not always been inspired by the same desire to assure the peace of the world, ameliorate the lot of many and elevate the ideal of justice, which animates all men."

President's Address.

In reply President Fallieres said: "It is particularly gratifying to this public to see you chosen to fill the position of Ambassador, and I receive with great pleasure your letters of credence. You have recalled in terms which touch me the associations that bind us to France, and I am convinced, now that your high functions place you in touch with our public life, that you will experience genuine satisfaction in residing here. The fullest co-operation of myself and my Government is assured you for the accomplishment of your mission, and we are proud to have for us to collaborate with you constantly for the closer union of France and the United States and for the attainment of that common end which you have so happily denoted. Be welcome among us."

Upon the departure of Mr. White the band again played the American national anthem and the party was escorted back to the embassy.

The principal international questions confronting Mr. White, upon assuming the post of Ambassador, will be the French tariff rates.

Piles Cured Quickly at Home

Without Pain, Cutting or Surgery—Instant Relief.

We Prove It. Sample Package Free.

Seven people out of ten are said to have piles. Not one man in a million need have them, and we are proving it every day at our own expense. We send a sample package of the wonderful Pile Cure to any person absolutely free.

We don't do this as a matter of amusement or philanthropy, but because it is to our interest to do so. We know that the sufferer from piles, tormented and driven almost crazy by this branch of trouble, will find such immediate relief that he will go at once to his drugist and buy a box and get well.

We know that we have got the greatest remedy in the world for piles, and we are ready and willing to stand or fall by the verdict of those who make the sample that he at once bought a box. Was it just the same? Undoubtedly. Since it cured him after all sorts and kinds of things had failed.

Here is a sample of the kind of letters we get every day and we don't have to ask for them:

"Received your sample of Pile Cure and have given it a fair trial and it has proven the best ever tried and I offer effecting a complete cure. I can recommend you highly in this vicinity. Have used your sample and one box, and it has been a complete cure. It has been worth $100 to me."

Thanking you for the sample and the cure, I will recommend you to every body. Yours respectfully, Julius Meyer, dealer in feathers, ginseng and hides, Bedford, Ind.

Pyramid Pile Cure is for sale at every drugist's at 50 cents a box, or if you would like to try a sample first, you will receive one by return mail by sending your name and address to The Pyramid Drug Company, 59 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Mich.

In conclusion Mr. Burton referred to some length to the Kansas delegation to the Republican convention of 1904, saying that the movement supporting Hoke for Governor was given a false coloring and the President believed that it was right under cover, on him, and

NICK WARISSE'S BOOTH.

WHERE TO GET A TASTE OF NICK'S BREAD.

"Nick's" Bread is fast becoming a household word in Louisville and the number of patrons of this firm has been greatly increased by the attractive display at the Exposition. "Certainly looks good," is the expression nearly always heard when a woman passes this booth. And it certainly does look good, and tempting, too, as it is passed out to the visitors at the booth. "Nick Warisse is earning a reputation for making the best bread in Louisville," said Mr. Warisse, "and he will keep it up." The methods employed in the baking of "Nick's" Bread are the most modern and sanitary. There is nothing lacking, from the materials to the handling, to make the bread wholesome and delicious. If you have not yet had a sample of "Nick's" Bread ask for one at the "Nick's" booth and you will be convinced that there is a virtue in bread-making. You have never found before. Save the labels, for they are good for premiums.

LET RAILROAD MEN RUN THE RAILROADS

STOCK TICKERS HAVE NO PLACE IN OFFICES.

THOMAS F. RYAN CONDEMNNS PRESENT POLICY.

PEOPLE OWN TRUNK LINES.

Washington, March 23.—Thomas F. Ryan, of New York, passed through Washington today en route to his country home at Oak Ridge, Va. Mr. Ryan did not call on President Roosevelt or any other Government official, although he spent a few hours at his residence here, where Mrs. Ryan is staying. When asked if he came here to talk with President Roosevelt, Mr. Ryan said:

"No, I do not expect to see the President. I am on my way to my place at Oak Ridge, Va., for rest. Besides, there is nothing more that I can do affecting the problems now confronting the President."

"You mean the railroad problems?" "Yes, I mean the railroad situation. The railroads are really owned by the people and not by Wall street brokers. They should be taken out of Wall street and the stock quotation tickers should be taken out of the railroad offices. The railroad offices and the practical railroad men who are charged with the responsibility of operating the railroads should be in absolute control. They should welcome every opportunity to confer with the President, adding much in his efforts to reach a solution that will be fair and just to the country and to the corporations, and insure strict obedience to the law."

"What is your view of the present financial situation?"

"One of the bad features of the sit-

NINETY-NINE YEARS

LENGTH OF LEASE TAKEN ON WALNUT-STREET PROPERTY.

Holding Company After Three Years Probably Will Erect Business Block On Site.

The property at 311 West Walnut street owned by Harry T. Whayne has been leased for a period of ninety-nine years by J. L. Strassel, Jacob Bornstein, T. B. and S. M. Duncan. The stipulation of the lease is that 5 per cent. of a valuation of $45,000 shall be paid yearly for the next twenty years, after which 5 per cent. shall be paid on the net valuation, which shall be made every ten years, until the expiration of the lease. The lessors contemplate erecting a fine business house on the lot, which fronts seventy-five feet on Walnut street and runs back one foot to an alley, but no definite plans have been arrived at.

The large house on the property is now used as a boarding-house by Mrs. L. R. Rawls. Her lease extends three years, and it is not likely that the new lease will secure possession until her lease expires. T. B. Duncan, one of the lessors, said last night that really he could not tell what would be done with the property, but that it was the intention of the lessors to erect a handsome business structure as soon as they come in possession. He said no plans had been discussed for a building. The four men believe they have a paying investment in the property, no matter what turns up. The deal leasing the property was consummated yesterday through the Bureau of Realty Company. The property adjoins the Catholic Woman's Club, which has been leased to Kelsker & Son, and on which will be erected a handsome business house. Other property adjoining the Whayne property may be obtained by the lessors for the same purpose, but the expiration of Mrs. Rawls' lease.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S AID PLANS TO GIVE A BENEFIT PLAY.

New House and Other Improvements Will Follow Securing of Leases Quarters Now Wanted.

Plans for the building of a new boat-house and increasing the ground accommodations of the Louisville Boat Club, which were discussed at the meeting of the club at 720 Seaboard street, Sunday afternoon, at the present almost altogether on the obtaining of suitable and desirable wharfage quarters for the boat-house and the headquarters of the club in general and the Wharfage Committee in particular are casting long shadows on the little strip of land, which is the site of the wharf of the Louisville and Jeffersonville ferry landing. The decision of the club to go into liquidation and the proposed sale of the property, which is the site of the wharf of the Louisville and Jeffersonville ferry landing, is charged with negotiating for and submitting to the April meeting of the club three sets of plans for the house. The well-known firm of P. Taylor & Co., architects, is now in the process of preparing plans for the building of a new clubhouse to be ready for occupancy by the season of 1908. The Boat Club Building Company, which is yet to be incorporated, will be capitalized at $10,000 and will have its headquarters at the meeting Friday night, held after the adjournment of the Boat Club meeting, substantially to launch the new club and assure the building of the proposed new house.

Drunkennes A Curable Disease

"Orrine Has Done a World of Good in Chicago."

Public Drug Co. Who Have Handed Orrine for Over Five Years Testify to the Merits.

Dr. Norman Kerr, an English authority on alcoholism, says: "No disease is more common than inebriety and yet none so seldom or so slowly remedied." "There are but few families who have not one or more members afflicted with this terrible disease, for such it is. Will power alone will not cure the drink habit, but have lost all desire for drink. This new cure, this treatment destroys the desire for liquor, so that the drink is not missed. The well-known firm of P. Taylor & Co., writes: "We are happy to advise you that we have seen many a gross case of your remedy and a great many remarkable cures of the drink habit have come to our notice. We know of many cases where your valuable remedy has cured drunkards and been the means of making good citizens of hopeless cases."

The Polk Miller Drug Co., Richmond, Va., also writes: "Mothers and sisters have been helped by Orrine in many cases without their knowledge, and we have seen many a man who has been ransacked and a heap of clothing in carry away his plunder."

Two Deaths At Campton. Campton, Ky., March 23.—[Special.]—Two prominent citizens of this county died this morning. John Davidson, a prominent merchant of Daysboro, who had been in a hospital at Lexington for some time for throat trouble, died, and will be brought back here for burial. Alex. Ledford, one of the first settlers of the county, and one of the wealthiest farmers of the county, died at the residence of his son, Pine Ridge, and will be buried in the Cox cemetery to-morrow. He leaves a widow and seven children.

Paducah Excited Over Assault, and Armed Crowd Searches, But In Vain.

Paducah, Ky., March 23.—[Special.]—In a desperate battle with a negro sneak thief this morning at 9 o'clock Mrs. R. H. Hudnell, residing opposite the south end of Wallace Park on the Broadway road, was bruised, but succeeded in routing the negro. Immediately after the news of the assault was telephoned to the city hall and within a short time after the battle several armed men were scouring the woods for the fellow.

The greatest excitement prevailed, and patrolmen and detectives from the city force were detailed, but were unsuccessful in capturing the negro. Mrs. Hudnell had left her house for a few minutes and returned to find the negro sitting preserves in the kitchen. When she demanded his business he said he had come to borrow a rake. She ordered him away and he attacked her. Mrs. Hudnell seized a broom and struck the negro, who wrestled it from her hands and knocked her down. He then dashed through the glass which extended along the whole rear side of the kitchen.

Everything in the house had been looted, and the negro was ready to ransack, and a heap of clothing in carry away his plunder.

election may be directory only." (Sec. 70.)

"These provisions of a statute which affect the time and place of the election, and the legal qualifications of the electors are generally of the substance of the election, while those touching the recording and return of the legal votes received, and the mode and manner of conducting the mere details of the election, are directory." (Sec. 28.)

These voting places having been illegally removed, it follows that the returns from them must be excluded, regardless of the other charges concerning them. If this becomes unnecessary to go into the tedious task of reviewing the enormous mass of testimony taken upon that charge. We will, however, say in this connection that while it is apparent that a large number of voters appeared in the adjourned voting places and voted, it is nevertheless apparent that in some instances the ballot boxes were stuffed and that the removals in such cases were made for that purpose, although doubtless many of the voters were bona fide. The criminal law should deal with that feature. While we have nothing but the severest condemnation for such acts, our sphere of action is confined to the legal effect of these illegal removals upon the election as a whole.

The following table shows the registration separately and in totals, and the majority received by the Democratic candidates in said precincts as shown by the recount of the ballots. (Table No. 3.)

RUPTURE.
NOTED EXPERT HERE.

SEELEY, WHO FITTED THE CAZAR
OF RUSSIA, HERE ONLY THREE DAYS LONGER.

P. H. Seeley, the Chicago truss expert, is at the Seelbach Hotel and will remain in the city Sunday, Monday and Tuesday only.
Mr. Seeley a few years ago received a call to St. Petersburg to wait upon the Czar of Russia. He said: "The latest improved truss retains any case of hernia at once and reduces the opening in ten days on the average case."
Mr. Seeley says if any interested persons call during his stay he will be glad to show them without charge or fit them if desired. Local physician present.

ORCHESTRA INCREASED.

USUAL NUMBER OF NEW YORK
SYMPHONY CLUB NOT ENOUGH.

Will Appear At Spring Festival Under Direction of Walter Dam-rosch Himself.

The New York Symphony Orchestra, which will be heard at the music festival to be given in the First Regiment Armory April 28, 19 and 20, under the direction of Walter Damrosch, will be increased over the usual number of members taken on tours throughout the country. The addition to the orchestra has been ordered by the members of the music committee of the Louisville May Music Festival Society at the earnest behest of Mr. Damrosch, who declared that the elaborate programme to be given demanded the increase. This orchestra, which is one of the most famous in the country, has recently been placed on a salary basis by the New York Symphony Society and thus takes first place in the New York musical world. The orchestra has been heard here before much to the pleasure of those who attended the concerts.

Mr. Damrosch founded this orchestra several years ago, and so long have its members played together, and so proficient have they become in musical masterpieces that Mr. Damrosch is forced to use only the minimum amount of effort in directing them.
When he first began conducting he used the regulation baton, but soon discarded this and is now using a little stick about the size of a lead pencil. Even this is discarded by the great conductor now at times, merely a glance or the lifting of a finger serves the purpose.
The recent addition of six famous wood-wind players has brought the orchestra to its present high degree of efficiency. It is composed of men of all nationalities, but, oddly enough, the English horn is played by a Frenchman and the French horn by a German. The orchestra is divided as follows: Eight first violins, eight second violins, six violas, four cellos, four basses, nine wood-wind, four horns, three trumpets, three trombones, one tuba, one kettledrum, one big drum, one snare drum, one cymbal and one harp.

With the festival less than a month off members of the Publicity and Promotion Committee are making double efforts to complete the sale of season tickets. More than 700 tickets have already been sold, and it is anticipated that at least 600 more will be sold.
Purchasers of season tickets will be able to make reservation of seats for three days, beginning April 10, and after that the single concert tickets will be placed on sale.

WHO FIRED BULLETS? NOW QUESTION AT CUSTOMHOUSE.

Judge W. G. Dearing, custodian at the Customhouse, is endeavoring to learn the identity of the person who fired a bullet through one of the windows on the fifth floor of the building.
The window is on the south side of the building, in the office of the naval recruiting station. The bullet was fired some time between 5 o'clock Friday afternoon and 6 o'clock Saturday morning, as the hole in the window was not discovered until yesterday morning. The ball passed through the window and imbedded itself in the plastering on the opposite wall. From the course of the bullet, which was of 32-caliber, it was evidently fired by some person standing on the south side of Broadway.
Some time ago a bullet was fired through the clock on the tower of the Customhouse by some miscreant, and it is believed that the same person was taking another shot at the clock Friday night, when the bullet went wild and pierced the window instead.

WEEK OF GOOD THINGS AT PHOENIX RINK ANNOUNCED.

An excellent list of attractions is announced for the coming week at the Phoenix rink, beginning with the graceful skating contest for the fair sex this afternoon. As the feature for to-night a couples' race has been booked, in which the entry of several teams has been received. This event is one which was originated at the Phoenix Rink, and one which never fails to amuse and entertain.
Prizes will be awarded to both members of the winning team and the victory will doubtless prove a big drawing card. For Tuesday night, an obstacle race for women is announced, on Wednesday night, a match race at one mile will be the offering, and on Friday the after-skating dancing session will hold the boards from 10:30 until 12. With this extraordinary bill of features, the Phoenix rink should enjoy another week of big attendance.

LOUISVILLE BOWLERS
GOING TO ST. LOUIS.

Eight bowling teams will leave Louisville at 10 o'clock this morning over the Southern railroad for St. Louis, Mo., where they are entered in the International Bowling Tournament now in progress in that city. The bowlers will be accompanied to St. Louis by Arch R. Cook, city passenger agent of the Southern Railway Company. The Louisville bowlers hope to make some record-breaking scores during the next two or three days.

Fourteen To Graduate From Newsboys' Night School.

LARGEST CLASS IN HISTORY OF ORGANIZATION.

MANY ADULTS ENROLLED AT THIS INSTITUTION.

AN INTERESTING PROGRAMME.

Ten boys and four girls, comprising the largest class ever graduated from the Newsboys' night school, will receive their diplomas Wednesday night, at the Louisville Male High School building, First street, near Chestnut street, where the commencement exercises will be held.

An appropriate speech, as has been the custom each year, will be made by Judge Henry S. Barker, of the Court of Appeals, and the Home orchestra of the Newsboys' Home, will give a concert for twenty or thirty minutes before the exercises begin. Special preparations have been made for this commencement and the graduates have been at work for the past few weeks getting their dialogues, recitations and speeches ready.

The newsboys' night school has been in existence for twelve years, starting with a class registration of thirty pupils for the first year, while to-day the registration of the school numbers 220. When the school was first started, Mrs. M. B. Tucker was placed in charge and was able to take care of the pupils herself, but now she has a corps of four teachers and the school will shortly need another to teach the extra pupils that are joining every day.

School's Growth Rapid.

Judge R. H. Thompson, the founder of the Newsboys' Home, urged Mrs. Tucker to take up the work and she did so at his request, the Louisville School Board providing for the teacher's salary and furnishing the necessary books and other things. The school's equipment, setting aside an annual appropriation for the expenses that the school might incur. Since the opening day of the school twelve years ago, it has grown rapidly and as only working boys or girls were allowed to enter, it has done a wonderful amount of good among the working class of children and men, who did not and do not have the time to attend day school.

The classes correspond to those of the Louisville public schools in every particular and run from the first grade to the eighth grade and then the pupils enter the bookkeeping class, from which they graduate. It is the only school in Louisville where other authority than that of the parent is necessary and the school has the proud record of never having to expel a pupil. During the course of the twelve years of the school's existence, only one death has occurred.

Superintendents and prominent men from Seattle to New York have visited the school and all have left with the expressed opinion that the school was complete in every respect and answered its purpose exactly. Mrs. Tucker was called to Owensboro recently to lay plans for night schools for the working boys and girls of that city and laid plans corresponding in every detail to the Newsboys' Home night school, with the result that the school in Owensboro will be in operation in a short time, supplying a long-felt want. This school in Owensboro will be supported by charity organizations. It has been remarked by many, who are interested in the Home night school, that every graduate from the school so far has been placed in a good position and those who stayed in their former positions all have received a substantial increase in salary.

Many Adults In Attendance.

Although the school is held at the Newsboys' Home, there are only about twelve newsboys who attend the classes, and this number has never been increased since the school was begun. The pupils who attend the school range in age from twelve to sixty years, and at present the school has forty-two regular attendants. The bookkeeping class has been installed during the past five years, and although, outside of this year's graduating class, there have only been twenty graduates from the bookkeeping class, the fact that the bookkeeping class has been added has done much to increase the attendance at the school, and it seems to be the ambition of all the pupils to graduate from this class.

Mrs. Tucker said that the school taught forty-six foreigners the English language last year, and this year's classes have many foreigners among them, she said, take quite readily to the work given them and do all in their power to master the English language and the lessons given them.

The Newsboys' Home night school has a five months' school session and the classes keep for two hours each night, with the exception of Saturday and Sunday, commencing at 7:30 o'clock and letting out at 8:30 o'clock. The school has the same holidays that are given the public schools.

Serious Handicaps Overcome.

Following are the members of the graduating class who will be given their diplomas next Wednesday night:

AFTER YEAR'S ILLNESS

DEATH RELIEVES JOHN M. CABELL OF SUFFERING.

Wholesale Grocer Had Climbed To Head of Firm Through Own Efforts—Funeral Yesterday.

John M. Cabell, a member of the firm of Cabell, Bayne & Co., wholesale grocers, was buried in Cave Hill cemetery yesterday afternoon, after funeral services which were held at the Second Presbyterian church, the Rev. Dr. Egbert Watson, pastor, officiating. Mr. Cabell died of Bright's disease at his home, 516 West Broadway, Friday night at 9:30 o'clock. He had been an invalid for the past year, and since Christmas had been confined to his bed. He is survived by two sisters and a brother, Prof. B. F. Cabell, president of Potter College, of Bowling Green.

Mr. Cabell was sixty-three years of age and was born at Campbellsville, and all his life lived in Kentucky. Since 1875 he had been a resident of Louisville, and since 1889 had been a partner in the firm of Cabell, Bayne & Co. When he first came to this city Mr. Cabell had been a traveling salesman for Moore, Brenmaker & Co., wholesale grocers, and later associated himself with Henry Murrell & Co. After the death of Mr. Murrell, Mr. Cabell purchased an interest in the company, and since that time the firm has been known as Cabell, Bayne & Co.

Mr. Cabell was a prominent church worker and had been a member of the Second Presbyterian church of this city since he first made his home in this city. Mrs. Cabell died six years ago.

Marriage Licenses.

Marriage licenses were issued yesterday to the following: H. Milton Wheeler and Clara Mason Browning, Theodore Green and Anna R. Marston.

The Suit's Testimony

By Himself.

JUDGE—look at me now! See the way my lapels bulge—Notice the unevenness of my shoulders—how they have fallen away—See how broken and lumpy looking I am in front—Don't you think from the way I'm twisted here and distorted there that I'm about the worst looking suit you ever saw?

Yet there's good material in me, Judge. If I had been properly cut and made up, you wouldn't see me in this terribly twisted condition—not much.

Between these two prisoners my present condition was assured. For the tailor here cut me altogether improperly, then hustled me through a lot of inexperienced, hunger-driven operatives who "slammed" me together any old way.

And when I came from their hands, I was badly made—I felt it. I should have been carefully taken apart and made over by skilled tailoring experts—then I might have had a slight chance of being a good suit.

But no—that would cost money. I was thrown to Old Dr. Goose—the Hot Iron and the Steam Press, and I was made into a suit like thousands of other ill-made suits that are being worn all over town.

He stretched me here and shrunk me there till every thread and strand of fabric ached and ached. But he made me look the part of a well-made suit like thousands of other ill-made suits that are being worn all over town.

Now that's the Charge I have against the prisoners. I might have been made into a suit that would have been a credit to the city. How do I know? Because there are clothes so made—"Sincerity Clothes" is their name.

You won't find a Sincerity Suit in my condition—not in a thousand years—in Sincerity Clothes are made right from Start to finish.

Sincerity Clothes are designed and Cut by the most expert and knowing tailors in America.

When they're tailored by expert needleworkers who Sew Shape and Form permanently into the Fabric.

When a Sincerity Suit is made, it is rigidly inspected—the few slight alterations that may possibly be required are made by expert needleworkers, not by Old Dr. Goose.

All these things cost money of course—A Sincerity Suit costs the Sincerity Makers more money to make than it cost the prisoners here to make me.

But—here's the most remarkable part—A Sincerity Suit doesn't cost the wearer a Single Cent more than I find my class of Poorly Made cost him.

All first grade ready-to-wear dealers carry Sincerity Clothes, Judge—if you want to be sure, see that this label is in the Coat—it insures Style, Service and Satisfaction.

HOMES IN DEMAND

Real Estate Dealers Like Residence Property.

INQUIRIES EXCEED SUPPLY ES-
SPECIAL SMALL COTTAGES.

MARKET IN DOWN TOWN RE-ALTY STRONG AND BRISK.

FEW BIG DEALS, HOWEVER.

Real estate men are a unit in asserting that there was considerable activity manifested in the Louisville real estate market last week. Those dealers who make residence and suburban property a specialty report that business was exceedingly brisk. Most of the deals last week were in lots and residences, the prices of which varied from $400 to $2,500. The investment sentiment continues strong. The demand for small cottages is far greater than the supply. The largest sale of property for apartment purposes reported last week was that of John H. Brand of the Overacker home at Third avenue and A street to C. W. Gheens, who will erect a handsome apartment house on the lot.

The largest deal during the week in the way of rentals was that of the Ketcher lease for fifty years on the Caldwell property now occupied by the Catholic Woman's Club, on Walnut street, between Third and Fourth avenues. The lease was made on a basis of 6 per cent on a $100,000 investment. The Caldwell estate will begin work on the new building at once and it will be five stories high and of pressed brick.

Many Lots Sold.

Arthur Mueller, of the firm of Arthur Mueller & Co., said yesterday that never in the history of the real estate business here had he seen such activity in lots and small houses. He said that during the week he had sold fifty or sixty vacant lots in the West End on which small homes will be built. He said that the demand for rental of small cottages was so great that he had said that applicants thronged his office every day wanting cottages in the suburbs. Mr. Mueller looks for a continuance in the demand for residence property during the spring and summer.

The market in business property in the downtown district is strong and the owners are holding seemingly for better prices. Inquiries for this kind of property are numerous. "I know of several large deals on for business houses," said J. L. Litchow Smith, of the Columbia Trust Company, "but they are in such shape that it will not do to make them known. In several instances I believe that the deals will be consummated within the next few days. Buyers in costly real estate are always cautious and will take their time above everything else. I look for a good business in real estate for the next few months."

Watching With Interest.

Real estate men are watching with great interest the outcome of the agitation of municipal improvement matters which have been so much discussed during the past few months. It is believed that the coming improvement will have a marked effect on the real estate values of Louisville and suburbs, as soon as any definite move is made toward a realization of any of the larger measures now under contemplation.

The more important measures are the extension of the sewer system, the construction of the boulevards connecting the parks, the proposed reconstruction of many of the streets in the business section and the making of new streets in various parts of the city. Other improvements of a public nature, the opening of the new public library, and other improvements of a public nature. All these measures are considered of great importance to the development of the city and the real estate interests are working for a consummation of them.

Houses of Moderate Size.

"It is the experience of brokers, as well as of builders, that whatever the condition of the market, there is never an overabundance of houses of moderate size and rent. What is meant by houses of moderate size is the two-story house, containing five to seven rooms, and renting for about $25 to $40 per month, said a well-known real estate man. It is probable that there never was a time when houses of this class could not find tenants, and that fact is recognized to a large extent by men whose business it is to meet this phase of the market demand. One reason why more houses of this class are not built, is said, is because it is difficult to secure ground at such prices that building would be profitable.

"The cost of ground has in many instances been the controlling factor in determining the kind and style of houses to be erected. It is, of course, impossible to either sell or rent a two-story house for as much as a three-story house, and in the calculation of the builder it is probable that it is just this difference that represents the margin of profit to him. This is the case, when it is well known that margin has been brought down to the lowest limit.

Profits In Building.

"Such is the competition that has arisen, and such has been the advance both of material and labor, that the difference between the total outlay on a house and the figure at which it can be placed on the market is so slight as to make it appear to the builder of former days hardly worth while to undertake the enterprise. But in the business of building houses, as in nearly every line, modern conditions have wrought many changes and among them has brought into general practice the rule of quick sale and small profits.

"As has been said, the cost of the ground determines largely the character of the house, and where that item is a large one, it is necessary, as a rule, to put more money into the house, and, of course, to get more out of it.

Always In Demand.

"This is one explanation of the existing condition where houses of this sort are not offered in abundance. Of course, the manner of living has altered together with the increase in incomes and the general prosperity which has come to all classes. In spite of that, however, the great bulk of any community are those of small and limited incomes, and it is entirely natural and to be expected that this class should be in evidence in the rental and buying departments of the real estate business. It is just as true to-day as it ever was, that the small house renting for $25 to $40 per month is the one that is most in demand and which may be said to be always in demand.

"The only question that arises in the mind of the practical man, who is well aware of this situation and would like to be in a position to meet it, is how to be able to do it and make his profit out of it. He recognizes the fact that he cannot do it if he is obliged to pay high prices for land, and hence it is that the search for cheap land is so persistent. It may be said that the situation in this respect is changing, even in the face of a growing population, and that it is due mainly to the extension of rapid transit facilities, so that localities heretofore remote from the center are now within easy reach. In this way large tracts of what is termed suburban property is brought into the market, and the result of such competition is naturally enough scaling down in prices.

Effect On Land Values.

"The entire range of property is affected, that which is known as inside property as well as that which is outside the old urban limits. Uniformity in values is made more general and is extended out farther from the closely built up center. The effect of this process is already apparent in the market for unimproved land, and while there are other causes which contribute to the same result, namely, the increase in the cost of buildings so that the cost of erection of one house as compared with a number going up at the same time is much greater, still the lack of demand for single building lots in residence sections point strongly to the trend of affairs.

"There is another condition here which tends to the same end, and that is the effort that is made to supply the really surprising market for the purchase of houses used as a prelude to the building of a great part of the building is done by those who are simply builders and who want to get their money out of each undertaking as rapidly as possible in order to be able to finance another similar one. They build to sell, but there is another class which no doubt will increase in the future who build for investment. They don't want to sell, but do intend to rent, and when that form of investment gets under good swing, there is no doubt that the supply of moderate size and moderate rental houses will be increased.

As An Investment.

"When investors of this class get into the market it is reasonable to suppose that not only will the unoccupied land within and near the old city limits be taken care of, but that the progress of building will be extended for long distances toward the line. Dwelling houses are always in demand, especially of the class that is always a demand of large sums of money that will not doubt be a sufficient inducement to those who have the task of determining the kind of investment to make.

"The fact that the apartment house was thought to be designed to meet the want of moderate sized houses, and to a large extent they have served a useful purpose in this direction, but after all it is said and done, while the apartment house of all grades is being built, and many people, still they have not taken the place of the individual house, and it is believed that the growth will continue.

"The fact that is referred to in the foregoing, that a noticeable feature of the market of to-day is the demand for houses is a sufficient evidence. Certainly at this time when the number of apartment buildings has increased at a rapid rate, it is the recognition of that fact by the investor that may be looked for as a phase of the market for the future."

EFFECT OF THE FOOD LAW.

Driving Many Worthless Catarrh Medicines Out of Existence.

The Pure Food and Drug Law, which went into effect the first of January, has already shown the good that will follow its enforcement.

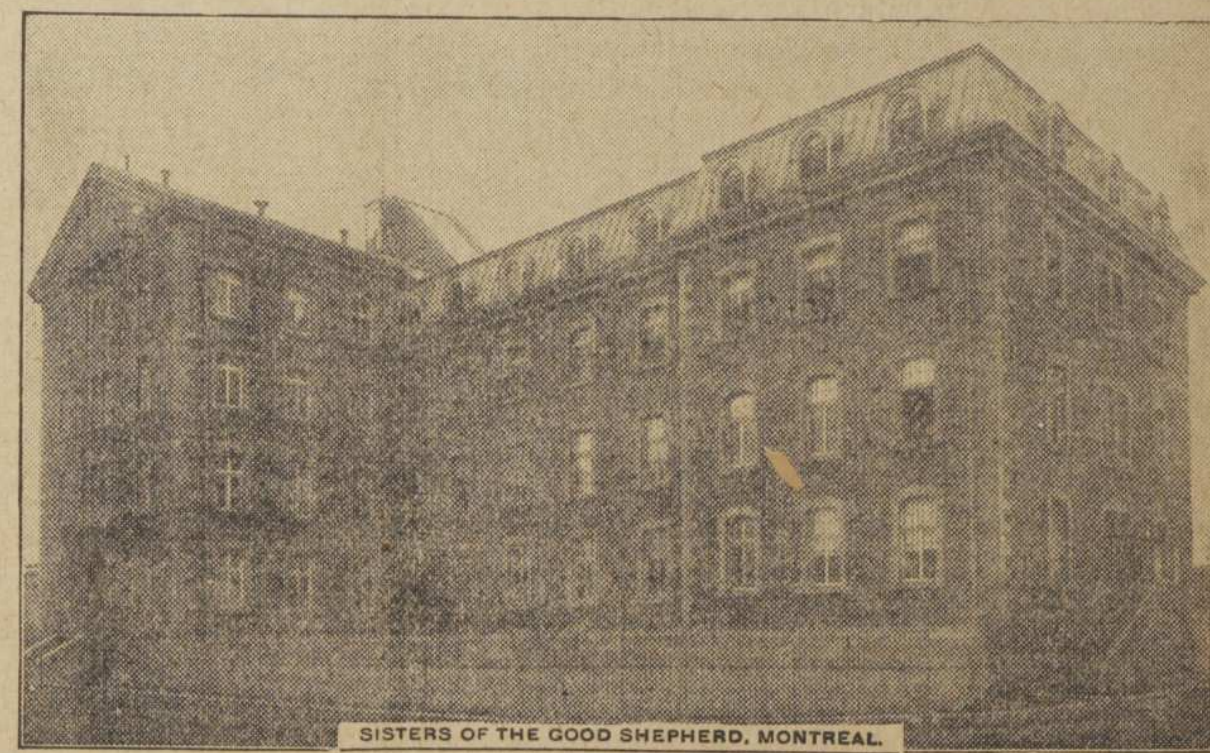

Many worthless remedies, that have been advertised for the cure of catarrh, a disease that is universally prevalent, have been driven out of existence by the Pure Food Law.

The effect of this is to increase the sale of remedies that are valuable and that fulfill the provisions of the law. Hyomel, for example, is meeting with a larger sale than ever before, and P. Taylor & Co., Incorporated, is still selling it under a guarantee that it will cure catarrh or the money will be refunded. It is a scientific treatment that is recommended by the best physicians. It cures catarrh without any dosing, through inhaling medicated healing air penetrates to the most remote parts of the nose, throat and lungs, searches out and kills all catarrhal germs, and soothes and heals any irritation in the mucous membrane.

The complete Hyomel outfit costs $1.00. Extra bottles if needed, 50c, and is sold by P. Taylor & Co., Incorporated, under the guarantee that it will cure or cost nothing.

PROMINENT HOSPITALS SAY

PE-RU-NA IS EFFICIENT IN RELIEVING ALL CATARRHAL DISEASES.

HOSPITALS ALL OVER THE CONTINENT FIND PE-RU-NA VALUABLE IN TREATING ALL CATARRHAL DISEASES

CATARRH of the respiratory organs is a common ailment in Canada for at least two-thirds of the year.

This condition is no doubt caused by the long, severe winters experienced in this part of the continent. Therefore, when Peru-na was discovered by Canadian people to be a reliable remedy for these catarrhal diseases, it at once became a popular medicine, not only among individuals and in families, but in the great hospitals, where it was used as a preventive and relief in hundreds of cases. These institutions do not hesitate to give their endorsement of the remedy which has been so helpful in the treatment of their poor and sick.

Among these institutions is that of the Sisters of Good Shepherd, who gave the following endorsement:

The Peru-na Company, Columbus, Ohio.

Having used Peru-na for the past few months, for our sick and poor, we are happy to say that it has given us great satisfaction.

The Sisters of the Good Shepherd, August 20, 1903. Montreal.

After a continued use of the remedy, this institution has found no reason to change its good opinion of the remedy and expresses its satisfaction in the following terms:

Montreal, Nov. 7, 1903.
We found Peru-na a relief in several cases.

We can say it is a good tonic and we are very thankful.

Sisters of the Good Shepherd.

When catarrh once fastens itself upon the system it becomes an obstinate disease to eradicate. A systemic remedy—one that reaches every internal organ of the body—is an absolute necessity.

Peru-na is just such a remedy. It searches out the cause of the disease, healing and strengthening the mucous membranes, and thus giving Nature an opportunity to perform her part of the restorative process.

One of the many hospitals which have found Peru-na of value in treating old and obstinate cases of catarrh is the Hospital St. John, who write as follows:

"We are happy to tell you that your Peru-na has given us satisfaction. Three patients have tried it, one 65 years old, Renou Dupuis, afflicted with catarrh, is much relieved, more than he has been for a number of years.

"A young girl, 15 years old, had an obstinate cough, which half a bottle of Peru-na caused to disappear.

"As to myself, two bottles have convinced me that Peru-na is magnificent as a tonic.

"Before the treatment I could not walk for a quarter of an hour without experiencing much fatigue. Now I can walk a mile easily.

"Through these three cases we desire to make known to the public the efficiency of your remedy."

Hospital St. John, of St. Johns, Province of Quebec.

A later letter received from the same institution reads as follows:

"Three weeks ago I wrote to tell you how satisfactory we found Peru-na. We recommend it highly for colds, coughs, catarrh and neuralgia.

"I have used it myself as a tonic with the best results, taken as directed, half a teaspoonful every half hour."

Mrs. Etta Booker, Dundurn, Sask., X. W. T., Canada.

"I suffered with pelvic catarrh until I wrote to Dr. Hartman, and after taking treatment as he advised, I can say I am now cured of this most trying affliction, for which I am truly thankful. I think Peru-na the best medicine for catarrh. I never felt better in my life than I do at present."

Peru-na not only promptly relieves coughs and colds in their first stages, but is equally prompt and efficient for catarrhal diseases in the chronic stage. Of course, it is only reasonable to suppose that a great deal less medicine will be necessary to cure a slight attack of catarrh than would be required to relieve the ailment after it had been allowed to become chronic.

BAD BLOOD THE SOURCE OF ALL DISEASE

Every part of the body is dependent on the blood for nourishment and strength. When this life stream is flowing through the system in a state of purity and richness we are assured of perfect and uninterrupted health; because pure blood is nature's safe-guard against disease. When, however, the body is fed on weak, impure or polluted blood, the system is deprived of its strength, disease germs collect, and the trouble is manifested in various ways. Pustular eruptions, pimples, rashes and the different skin affections show that the blood is in a feverish and diseased condition as a result of too much acid or the presence of some irritating humor. Sores and Ulcers are the result of morbid, unhealthy matter in the blood, and Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., are all deep-seated blood disorders that will continue to grow worse as long as the poison remains. These impurities and poisons find their way into the blood in various ways. Often a sluggish, inactive condition of the system, and torpid state of the avenues of bodily waste, leaves the refuse and waste matters to sour and form uric and other acids, which are taken up by the blood and distributed throughout the circulation. Coming in contact with contagious diseases is another cause for the poisoning of the blood; we also breathe the germs and microbes of Malaria into our lungs, and when these get into the blood in sufficient quantity it becomes a carrier of disease instead of health. Some are so unfortunate as to inherit bad blood, perhaps the dregs of some old constitutional disease of ancestors is handed down to them and they are constantly annoyed and troubled with it. Bad blood is the source of all disease, and until this vital fluid is cleansed and purified the body is sure to suffer in some way. For blood troubles of any character S. S. S. is the best remedy ever discovered. It goes down into the circulation and removes any and all poisons, supplies the healthful properties it needs, and completely and permanently cures blood diseases of every kind. The action of S. S. S. is so thorough that hereditary taints are removed and weak, diseased blood made strong and healthy so that disease cannot remain. It cures Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Sores and Ulcers, Skin Diseases, Contagious Blood Poison, etc., and does not leave the slightest trace of the trouble for future outbreaks. The whole volume of blood is renewed and cleansed after a course of S. S. S. It is also nature's greatest tonic, made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, and is absolutely harmless to any part of the system. S. S. S. is for sale at all first class drug stores. Book on the blood and any medical advice free to all who write.

Nursing Mothers and Over-burdened Women

In all stations of life, whose vigor and vitality may have been undermined and broken-down by overwork, exacting social duties, the too frequent bearing of children, or other causes, will find in the most potent, invigorating, restorative, strength-giver ever devised for their special benefit. Nursing mothers will find it especially valuable in sustaining their strength and promoting an abundant nourishment for the child. Expectant mothers too will find it a priceless boon to prepare the system for baby's coming and to render the ordeal comparatively easy and painless.

It can do no harm in any state, or condition of the female system.

Delicate, nervous, weak women, who suffer from frequent headaches, backache, dragging-down distress low down in the abdomen, or from painful or irregular monthly periods, gnawing or distressed sensation in stomach, dizzy or faint spells, see imaginary specks or spots floating before eyes, have disagreeable, pelvic catarrhal drain, ulceration, prolapsus, anteversion, retroversion, or other displacements of womanly organs from weakness of parts, will, whether they experience many or only a few of the above symptoms, find relief and, generally, a permanent cure, by using faithfully and fairly persistently Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This world-famed specific for woman's weaknesses and peculiar ailments is a pure glyceric extract of the choicest native, medicinal roots without a drop of alcohol in its make-up. All its ingredients are printed in plain English on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. Dr. Pierce thus invites the fullest investigation of his formula knowing that it will be found to contain only the best agents known to the most advanced medical science of all the different schools of practice for the cure of all woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments.

Dr. Pierce's Lotion Tablets and Antiseptic Suppositories may also be used with great advantage conjointly with the use of the "Favorite Prescription" in all cases of ulceration, and in pelvic catarrh. They cost only 25 cents a box each, at drug stores or, sent by mail, post-paid on receipt of price in stamps by Dr. Pierce whose address is given below.

If you want to know about the composition and professional endorsement of the "Favorite Prescription," send postal card request to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for his free booklet treating of same.

You can't afford to accept as a substitute for this remedy of known composition a secret nostrum of unknown composition. Don't do it.

NEW COLON RISES

American Influences Transform City On Isthmus.

METHODIST MISSION HEAD-QUARTERS ESTABLISHED.

MORE MISSIONARIES NEEDED TO PROSECUTE WORK.

NOTES OF RELIGIOUS WORK.

Bishop T. B. Neely, appointed by the Methodist General Conference to superintend its work in Central and South America, visited Panama recently, on his way to South America. In an informal report he calls attention to the great changes seen in Colon, which lies in the republic of Panama, and in Panama itself, as the result of American work and influence. So great a change did he find in Colon in sanitary matters that he says a new Colon is literally rising at the command of the United States. Panama, the bishop says, would hardly be recognized by one who had not visited it for several years. It was a filthy place, with streets of mud and water, and constant epidemics. Now there are hard and smooth streets, with sewers and pipes for water supply, and yellow fever eliminated.

While in Panama Bishop Neely made arrangements for the purchase of land on which is to be erected a Methodist headquarters building, to be the center of work on the canal zone and in the Panama republic. The site is just across the street from the new Government house now being built at a cost of $400,000. A school has also been started, to be locally known as the American College of Panama, and at the head of it has been placed the Rev. J. C. Eldins, who has been working in the region for about a year.

The Methodist Episcopal Church was the first to plant an American Protestant mission on the Isthmus of Panama, work having begun something over two years ago under the Rev. Dr. T. B. Wood, who was transferred from Peru. Bishop Neely calls for more missionaries, especially for work among the Americans who are increasing in numbers. A new church under Methodist auspices is being built at Culebra, where the engineers are concentrating.

BACK INTO THE FOLD.
Reformed Episcopal Church May Be Returned By Old Church.

It is reported that efforts will be made by the next Protestant Episcopal General Convention to induce the Reformed Episcopal Church to return to the fold. There has long existed a committee of this convention on the orders of the Reformed Episcopal Church, but it has been more or less inactive. Now it is said to be preparing a report to be presented at Richmond next October. It is known that some leading laymen in the Episcopal Church had recently urged the committee to make new overtures.

The Reformed Episcopal Church had Bishop Cummins of Kentucky, as its first head and leader, and the grievance out of which grew the movement was ritualism. Some professed to believe that the Episcopal Church was destined in the then immediate future to be given over to ritualism in a marked degree. Hence the protest and separation. Now, however, the danger, if it ever existed, is deemed to be past. In New York City, where St. Thomas, St. Bar-practically impossible to arouse them to any extent.

Laymen, or some laymen at any rate, are saying that foreign missions have just been played with in the past, and that to evangelize the world with the present force of missionaries will take several centuries. Speed is considered desirable. The departure to England will propose, it is said, that American and English laymen take hold of the situation.

A part of the plan is to induce representative laymen to go around the world, and in small parties visit the various mission fields, reporting, when they get home again, what they saw. The movement to this end is only a few weeks old, yet already more than fifty laymen, all Americans, have been secured to go, all at their own expense. Some have already started and others will start within a few weeks. The departure to London in May is to try to get English laymen to accompany the Americans on these world tours of inspection.

EARLY TEACHER.

Former Negro Slave Woman's Memory To Be Honored.

Sunday-school leaders all over the country are showing interest in a project recently launched to honor the memory of a slave woman, Kate Ferguson, who is alleged to have been the founder of the first Sunday-school in New York. The memorial is to take the form of an institutional church for Afro-Americans, and it is proposed to erect for it a fine building in the center of one of the several negro colonies of New York City. The Bible Educational Association, devoted to work among the colored people of the South, is co-operating in the plan, as are a number of denominational leaders, especially Presbyterians.

Presbyterian interest in the project is due in part to the fact that it was a celebrated Presbyterian divine, the Rev. John M. Mason, who preached the sermon at the funeral of Alexander Hamilton, who discovered in 1792 that the colored woman, Kate Ferguson, was conducting a class in the study of the Bible every Sunday. From her example other similar classes were formed, although it was not until nearly a decade later that an organized Sunday-school, approaching the modern type, was found in New York.

There are many claimants for the honor of introducing the Sunday-school into the United States, and beginnings were made in several sections of the country within a few years after Robert Raikes' school in Gloucester, England, was organized. It is recorded that under direction of Bishop Ashbury a school was organized in Hanover county, Virginia, in 1788, and another is recorded from Charleston, S. C., in 1790. In 1791 the First-day or Sunday-school Society was formed in Philadelphia, and this organization is still in existence.

BAPTIST NATIONAL COUNCIL.

Its Organization Seriously Considered By Church Leaders.

Baptists of the North are energetically discussing the proposition of organizing, during the Baptist anniversary to be held in Washington in May, a National Council, which shall in some measure serve as a central organization of the denomination. Baptist leaders say that the younger element in the churches are urging the project, which some of the older people feel to be unnecessary, and some say, dangerous. For the Baptist is a denomination congregational in its polity, each individual church being a law unto itself, and conservative leaders express the fear that a National Council, once organized, would soon undertake to rule the churches.

But a day is to be devoted to the discussion of the project, during the missionary meetings in Washington, and the opinion is freely expressed that a permanent central organization will be the outcome. One of the advocates of the movement is President Faunce, of Brown University, who says that there is no intention of erecting a new body to have legislative power, nor is there intention to have any executive with authority over the church, but Baptists do need, he says, some organic means of expressing and guiding public opinion within and without the denomination. President Faunce advocates a council whose members shall be elected for fixed periods and whose duty shall be simply to express and advise.

Membership in the proposed council would be representative of the State conventions of the Northern States and of the great denominational societies. A council so composed might, leaders say, express Baptist public opinion, and in some measure guide it. An annual meeting is proposed, to be held at the same time and place as the missionary anniversary, and standing committees are proposed, to study specific problems during the intervals between meetings.

JAMAICA CHURCHES DAMAGED.
Bishop Jocelyne In America Seeking Aid To Rebuild Them.

Bishop Jocelyne of Jamaica has arrived in this country, sent thither to tell the story of the Kingston earthquake, with special reference to its disastrous effects upon church properties. He has already spoken in New York, and during his visit he is to be in Philadelphia and Washington. He will go thence to Toronto and Montreal, and near the end of April is to visit Boston and several New England cities. He reports that a few days since, Archbishop Nuttall, having occasion to ordain this year's graduates of the theological seminary, was unable to find any church or hall in condition to use for the service, and so the ordination took place out of doors, on the seminary lawn.

The Bishop, who is coadjutor of Jamaica with right of succession, says that the church of England in Jamaica must be wholly rebuilt and at least forty other churches, also under the archbishop's jurisdiction, will have to be repaired. Besides, there are many Presbyterian, Baptist and other churches that must be rebuilt and repaired. The bishop is, however, appealing especially to Episcopal givers for assistance for the Church of England. Until fifteen months ago the bishop coadjutor was a London rector, and had under him an immense parish work among the laboring people. He reports liking his West India work and home very much indeed. He is rector of a small parish at Mandeville, a suburb of Kingston, and here many American travelers attend service when in Jamaica over Sunday.

New Bible Study Movement.

A new Bible study movement has recently been started by a student at Harvard University—C. D. Pugsley, who is called the Sabbath College. His object is to do for the adults of churches what the Sabbath school does for the children. Sabbath colleges have already been organized in a number of churches, and pastors report that the plan is meeting with marked success.

The founder of the movement explains that it is designed to reach the people who have "outgrown" the Sunday-school, the services of which are for the most part arranged for children. Advanced or adult classes in the Sunday-schools meet the need only in part, and the Sabbath College is therefore designed as a separate organization, self-governing, its president being the pastor, and with, preferably, large classes, under competent teachers. A National Society of Sabbath Colleges has been formed, with Mr. Pugsley as president, and the Rev. C. P. Pledger, of Boston, as secretary.

The travelers rejected Thackeray, the majority feeling to see themselves in some future novel by the great English writer. The consequence was that men were running about saying: "Surely you're not going to vote for that scoundrel Moore?" Twenty-two votes were recorded and of these nineteen were blackballs. There he was blackballed. The difficulty was got over, however, in the following year by the rule which permits the election without ballot of persons distinguished in science, literature or public life.

There was a worse controversy over the election of George Moore, the philanthropist, to "Brooks." His nomination was in Ireland, and he seconded under a protest the ballot. The consequence was that men were running about saying: "Surely you're not going to vote for that scoundrel Moore?"

Mary Anderson Theater Will Be Ready April 1.

LOUISVILLE'S NEWEST PLAY-HOUSE STRICTLY UP-TO-DATE.

COMFORT AND CONVENIENCE OF PATRONS PROVIDED FOR.

ALL POSSIBLE SAFEGUARDS.

The Mary Anderson Theater, Louisville's newest playhouse, is fast nearing completion, and will be ready in every detail on the night of Monday, April 1, when the house will be dedicated. De Wolf Hopper with his latest production of "Happyland" has been selected by the Shuberts, under whose direction the new theater will be managed, as the opening attraction, and the personal popularity and local following of the big comedian assures unbounded success for the first week.

The Mary Anderson Theater is modern in every detail and is one of the finest in appointment in the United States, being absolutely fireproof and finished under the most stringent rules of the Building Department and the Board of Fire Underwriters of the State. The only wood in use throughout the entire house is the stage floor and around the windows and doors. The roof is finished with concrete and gravel, re-enforced with steel eight to ten inches thick, and by expert building inspectors the house is considered one of the safest in America.

Two Minutes To Clear House.

There are nine exits with the main entrance, and five additional exits, together with twelve windows, accessible in case of accident, while large and roomy fire escapes extend from each floor to the street on both sides of the building. There are also nine fire hose placed throughout the building and always ready for use, besides six fire extinguishers. With the number of exits that can be thrown open at a moment's notice the entire house, with a capacity crowd, can be emptied in from one and one-half minutes to two minutes. The seating capacity of the new theater is 1,400 and every seat in the house, from pit to dome, will be sold by coupon, this being the only theater on record where gallery patrons can obtain seats in advance at the box office.

The main entrance to the theater is two feet wider than the law requires, making it abundantly convenient for ingress and egress. The box office is on the right of the lobby as you enter the building, while on the left will be found the cigar stand and the entrance to the grill room, where the male patrons of the theater can adjourn between acts to smoke and discuss the play. Immediately upon entering the foyer can be found a large marble stairway leading to the women's reception and cloak room, where attendants will always be present to assist the patrons in removing their wraps. This room will be handsomely fitted up by the management with costly divans and paintings, and will be perfect in every detail.

The only objectionable feature to this auditorium is the fact that it is in the basement of the building instead of on the main floor, and while the appointments will be exactly the same, the stairway will not appeal to the patrons. Manager Williams regards this as the only feature of the big new playhouse that is in the least objectionable.

Ventilation Well Ordered.

One of the most modern and successful methods of heating is in use in the theater, and the air throughout the building is changed every twenty minutes, thereby removing all deviated air. The theater is heated from the adjoining building, and at no time will it be necessary to have fire in any section of the house. This in itself is a safe guarantee against accident by fire.

While that section of the building set apart for the patrons of the theater is modern in every respect, no detail is lacking to make the appointments on the stage and throughout that portion occupied by the show people the equal if not the superior of any playhouse in the country. The dressing-rooms are on the stage floor and the floor above, and are large and airy, and on each floor in connection with the dressing-rooms is a bathroom, while the dressing-room known as the "star's" dressing-room has a private bath in connection.

Besides the dressing-rooms on the first and second floors it has been found necessary to erect several more, and these will be placed in the basement under the stage. The same convenience for purifying the air in the auditorium section of the building will also be used on the stage and the dressing-rooms, and the performers will be afforded the greatest comfort. This machine supplies warm air in cold weather and cold air in warm weather, and patrons and performers will be as comfortable in hot and sultry weather as in the winter season. The new theater, it can safely be said, is the equal of any modern place of amusement in this country, and the theater-going public of Louisville will have reason to be proud of this latest addition.

The new theater will be managed by Frank Williams, formerly manager of the Broadway Theater, New York, while F. T. Shyne, of Syracuse, N. Y., will be treasurer. Messrs. Williams and Shyne have long been connected with the Shubert forces, and will be welcomed to Louisville. Treasurer Shyne will arrive in Louisville the early part of the week, and will throw open the box-office to the public, for the advance sale to "Happyland" on Thursday morning, March 28, and in the future the advance sale for attractions will begin three days before the opening night of the performance.

Paris, Ky., March 23.—The Bluegrass Traction Company is equipping all its cars with telephones and it will soon be possible to telephone from every tenth pole on any of the interurban lines between Lexington and the national towns of Paris, Georgetown and Versailles without getting off the car. The line to Paris is completed, and the others will be finished in a few days.

Artistic Advertisement.
A striking example of modern ideas in the advertisement of clothing is shown in the display of Levy Bros. in the Courier-Journal to-day. Departing from the accepted method of picturing, Levy Bros. have presented an artistic advertisement, pleasing to the eye and suggestive of the high quality of the advertised articles. It is an attractive, forceful presentation of a dignified business proposition. The advertisement has an individuality that is decided. It is an evidence of the progress and spirited prosperity of one of Louisville's greatest retail houses, one that has always anticipated the demands of the growing city.

Twenty Years An Invalid, But Cheerful and Industrious.

MISS DOLLIE ROSE.

Mayville, Ky., March 23.—[Special.]—There lives at Manchester, Adams county, O., twelve miles east of this city, on the Ohio river, a young woman who has for the past twenty years been confined to her bed from a cause that has baffled every physician that has treated her. Dollie Rose is the young woman's name. She was born at Rome, O., in 1887, and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Rose, who have been dead, the former for over twenty years, and the latter for nine years. When about two years old she stepped on a needle that was on the floor, and it broke off in her left foot. She suffered great pain from the wound, which finally healed up. The piece of needle was never found, and for nine years it troubled her. In its passage through her body the needle struck some vital part of her nervous system, it is thought,

Two Performances

Of "The Traveling Man" to be given on April 3—Crowded Houses Expected at Matinee and in the Evening.

THERE has been little or no entertaining during the past week and there will be even less this week, as it is Holy week, but the very air is palpitating with the agitation felt by all the young people who are to take part in "The Traveling Man." As one passes groups of girls on the street, one hears snatches of "Sahara Sarah," "She Looks Like Candy to Me," and other catchy and beguiling airs in Mr. Woolfolk's play.

Certainly the girls and men who are in the play are brimming over with enthusiasm and are throwing all the spirit and dash necessary to make the play a go into the various parts they assume.

One thing is certain. There was never such a lot of pretty chorus girls gathered together at one time. There are some fine dancers and singers among them, too. There have been some changes in the cast, as is inevitable in an amateur performance, but the women who have charge of the entertainment are delighted with the cast as it now stands.

The names of Miss Edmonia Robinson and Miss Marcia Robinson have been added to the cast in the last few days. Miss Edmonia Robinson is an unusually pretty girl and is a charming amateur actress. Miss Marcia Robinson is one of the best amateurs in Louisville, and has done excellent work in several performances given by the Dramatic Club and in another musical farce by Mr. Woolfolk, "The Manager." She has a fine song in "The Traveling Man," entitled, "Do Drop In At Dew Drop Inn."

The following is the cast:

Jim Dandy, who sells steam radiators, Archie York, who sells ladies' furs, Mr. Ralph Strother Hart Ware, who sells hardware, Marcus Pearl, who sells jewelry, Bill Durham, who sells tobacco, Mr. Clevie Kinkaid Crump, manager, Daley Shyne Opera Company, Mr. Norman Sweet Danny Doolittle, clerk of O'Leary House, Mr. Steve Orendorff Rastus Cole, the porter, Mr. William Robinson Bobby Burton, head bellboy, Belle Claire, proprietor's daughter and Dandy's sweetheart, Dolly Snow, soprano, passing off as Dolly Shyne, Miss Edmonia Robinson Daley Shyne, prima donna, Miss Marcia Robinson

The girls in the pony ballet are:

Anna Ferguson, Elizabeth Patterson, Charlie Wolfe, Gulnare Baker, Mary Frazee, Carrie Neal, Sue Vernon Wolfe, Menefee Wigram, Helen Munn, Miss Nellie May Hewitt

The upper ten chorus is composed of the following girls:

which he is now giving Monday evenings is brought to a close.

A few of the cultured people of the city, who had heard Mr. Griggs in the East, a large number from the Teachers' Club, who knew of his wonderful work and his splendid abilities, and a few who had heard of his great power as a lecturer, gathered to hear him. The lecture was superb, full of keen observation, deep thought and earnest purpose. It was delivered in a manner profoundly to impress the audience with the subject in hand, and to demonstrate the charming personality of the man.

Mr. John Nolen, in writing of Prof. Griggs in the Quebec Daily Telegraph, said:

In the field of education Edward Howard Griggs stands by himself. He is an altogether uncommon man, doing an uncommon work. Many attempts have been made to place the finger upon the source of his peculiar charm and power. Some have said that it rests in his insight into the human heart—that he is a seer; others that he has added to the artist's warmth and the open-mindedness of the truthseeker to the wisdom of the philosopher. Some have attributed his success to his remarkable power of clarifying difficult masterpieces, like the "Divine Comedy" of Dante and Goethe's "Faust," and compelling them to yield their spiritual messages. Another has said his power is in his wonderful gift of depicting the personality of great moral leaders, making them in a definite way serviceable to the ordinary man and woman. Someone else has remarked that he talks of things in which everyone is interested, in language which everyone can understand, and still another that his reverence for the truth makes his hearers enamored of it.

For the last five years Mr. Griggs has been the leading public teacher in America, speaking day and night, winter and summer, in all parts of the country, to audiences that have assembled to hear him. Each year the demand for his services becomes more persistent and widespread, until now there is no prospect of satisfying it, and he is confronted with the embarrassing necessity of selecting from the mass of invitations those fields of work that promise to be most permanently fruitful.

The tickets for the course of lectures to be given by Prof. Griggs may be obtained at the Woman's Club and at Smith & Nixon's.

Mrs. William Osborne is chairman, has the following members.

MAKES SUCCESSFUL DEBUT IN GRAND OPERA.

VIEWS OF SANDY HOOK, WHERE JIM HARGIS AND HIS CLAN WILL BE TRIED FOR MURDER OF DR. COX.

MISS MARY SIERSDORFER.

Miss Mary Siersdorfer is an American girl who recently made a great success as Santuzza in Cavalleria Rusticana before an audience of more than 3,000 at the Municipal Grand Opera-house, in Reggio-Emilia, one of the most important opera-houses in Italy. Miss Siersdorfer is a granddaughter of Mrs. Mary M. Siersdorfer, 322 Second street, and a niece of Charles Siersdorfer, a well-known Louisville business man. Miss Siersdorfer has taken as her stage name Marie Huette, her mother's maiden name. In speaking of her successful initial performance, Musical America of a recent date says: "A number of noted critics were present, and the universal verdict is that Marie Huette, a mere girl of barely twenty, gives promise of ranking among the world's great prima donnas, not alone for her remarkable voice, but for her great dramatic ability as well. At the end of the performance Marie Huette was repeatedly called before the curtain and all declared her to be one of the most notable debuts made upon the Italian stage. A reception by the directors of the opera-house and leading citizens was given in the young debutante's honor, and she signed a contract for several more representations for the same role that found such favor on its first performance. "Marie Huette's musical education was begun in New York City, her parents having placed her at the age of sixteen under the instruction of Lena Dora Devine, who soon realized her exceptional talents and predicted a brilliant future for her in grand opera. Two years later she appeared on the Metropolitan Opera stage, having been selected by Hansrich Corried to sing in the part of one of the Flower Maidens in "Faust". On the advice of Mr. Corried and many of the best music critics in New York, the young singer decided to complete her studies for Italian grand opera and, accompanied by her father and mother, left New York in October for Milan, Italy, where she has made her home, and surrounded by her family she has pursued her studies since then. "Fernando Guarino has been her vocal teacher and Signor Francesco Notino her teacher in acting. "The Italians wished the young American girl to assume an Italian name, but she insisted upon taking her mother's maiden name—Marie Huette."

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

An honest, tried and true remedy, of unquestionable curative value, made from Native Roots and Herbs. It contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and complies with all conditions of the Pure Food and Drugs Law. Its annual sales are greater than that of any other medicine exclusively for women. During its record of more than thirty years, its long list of actual cures of those serious ills peculiar to women, entitles Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to the respect and confidence of every fair minded person and every thinking woman. Merit alone can produce such results. Good advertising serves to call attention for a time, but merit alone can stand the test of time. All sick women should note these facts, and placing all possible prejudices aside, should realize the truthfulness of these statements, and when assailed with any of the numerous illnesses peculiar to their sex, should at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

Mrs. Pinkham Will Give You Helpful Advice Free

If there is anything about your illness you do not understand, write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice has helped thousands of women. For all this she will not charge you a cent; besides, she will keep your letter strictly confidential, as indicated by the fact that every private letter received by her during the last twenty years, and more, she now has in the Company's laboratory under lock and key—and no testimonial has ever been published without special written permission. Inspect Gasoline Boat.

E. L. Dorey, Supervising Inspector of Steamboats for this district, and Capt. John Abraham, assistant inspector, want to Jeffersonville yesterday afternoon, where they inspected the "Madison," a gasoline boat built at Capt. E. L. Howard's shipyard. It does service between Madison and Westport.

H'm! And yet you say you're not putting the hooks in me! If that isn't cold, straight, all-work blackmail, I don't know what is. You think you owe me something because I didn't treat your father just square. So you pay the grudge off by blackmailing me. Maybe your holy New England conscience is too nearsighted to see it's only a man's devil's ledger that two wrongs make a right."

treat your father just square. So you pay the grudge off by blackmailing me. Maybe your holy New England conscience is too nearsighted to see it's only in the devil's ledger that two wrongs make a right."

"Can't it be this case," I propose nothing of the sort."

"Then hush! in thunder do you want a scandal, and, thoroughly mystified. (If it ain't cash or—)

"Want you to give Mr. Standish a fair trial, or all? If I was you, I'd remove the embargo from his speeches and advertising; to open the columns of the paper to his views, and refer to him. To promise not to molest him in any way, not to allow your rowdies to molest him, and to reserve him from hiring halls. Not to stuff the ballot-boxes, falsify the returns, embarrass him, and to allow him to give him an equal chance with your voters; to conduct the campaign honestly, and to allow him to appeal to the voters. Will you do this?"

"And if I beat him at that?"

"Then, I'll give you the honest majority, that is no concern of ours. All I demand is that you fight in the open and on equal terms with your opponent. Caleb thought in silence for a few moments."

"If I do this?" he asked at last.

"Then, on the afternoon of election day, my brother shall turn over to you, or to your party, the entire Denlow correspondence."

"I have your word for that?" Certain copies and all.

"Yes."

"You don't lie. That's about the one fact I know for certain in my life. I've got your word, you'll be true. Can't say quite the same of me, eh?"

"You can't say that need an answer."

"Can't turn over the letters to me now, on my pledge to—"

"No," said Denlow, "I will. Hence, almost apologetically. I must—"

"And you're dead right. A promise is such a sacred thing that it's always wise to keep your finger on the trigger ill the red money" handed over, "I must to keep the sacredness from spoiling. As I understand it, I'm to loosen up on Standish; and then if I lick him fair, you and I are quits? I'll do it. Such a fight ought to prove pretty amusing. It'll be an experience anyhow, as Sol Townsend said when Father Healy told him he'd some day burn in hell. I'll accept those silly terms of yours for the same reason so many men stay honest. They don't enjoy it, but it's more fun than going to jail. I'll send out the orders first thing in the morning. And on the afternoon of election day I'll get that Denzlow stuff!"

"In case I should get absent-minded

That night when the votes are counted? You're a clever girl, Miss Linsler. Pity you're not a man, and then you could say that's all right. I don't need to be told. I'm glad like you isn't acting the part of a woman. You're a man, aren't you, nearly principle. And now," he said, "I'm changing to one for the time being, and I'm going to win. Now, maybe you'll both get out. I'm tired and—"

"Live and let live," Alice withdrew. The latter, looking back as she left the room, saw Caleb sitting doubled over, motionless in his chair, his gaze fixed on the fire.

Perhaps it was the flicker from the coal fire that had made her think it best to have grown in a moment infinitely old; his keen, light eyes expressively looking at her, and she had been there for when he glanced up and saw she was not yet gone, there was no expression of surprise or indignation, only a long and late Caleb Conover sat the lamp on the table flickered, guttered and went out. The five coils died and the room was left in the gloom of early autumn crept through the green shadows along with the encroaching darkness.

The clock on the wall chimed. Then again, and a third time, but the Rail-roader sat motionless.

At length he gathered himself together with an impatient grunt. He rose, unlocked the door and drew from a drawer a gaudy velvet case. As he opened it, the dying gleam of a multi-pointed dagger flashed on the eyes of his tight lips.

"She wouldn't have took it from me," Calbed said, with a shrug, while explaining to some invisible companion, "but I would 'at made Letty give it to me. She's a little better than that soft baby throat of hers. Hell!"

There was a swirling tide of clouds, a rushing of wings, a crash into the heart of the dull red embers.

The Railroad had fallen back into his arms, cramped, awkward attitude of reflection.

"First it was Jerry," he whispered to the darkness, "then it was the shadows. 'Er, Jerry, then Blanche, And now—her. That's worse than both the others put together. Not a one left."

The study door behind him was timidly opened. Calbed did not hear.

"Not a one left," he muttered again, "And—"

"Is anything the matter, dear?"

"No, nothing," he said, "I'm safe from the threshold. It's nearly—"

"You don't count," shouted Caleb Conover, with odd irrelevance. "Go to bed, can't you?"

CHAPTER XIII.

Caleb Conover Fights.

THE real campaign was at last under way, and the Mountain State thrilled as never before in the history of politics. At a composite convention made up of the Republican and lesser parties of the State, and held almost directly after the election, the Democratic faction lines were quite aside and Clive Standish nominated by acclamation. Ansel had presided, and scores of bolting Democrats were in attendance.

The Mountain State was now the State. Clive began what is still recalled as his "whirlwind campaign." Often ten speeches a day were delivered as he hurried from point to point. The record of his speeches, and the broad coast, as was other legitimate campaign literature. Because of the daring and the thoroughness of his work, taken as well as for the sane, practical reforms he advocated, he was everywhere listened to with interest.

The Mountain State was at last awake—awake and hearkening eagerly to the voice of the man who had roused it from its Rip Van Winkle slumbers.

Horried, wholly aghast, the Conover Heutenants had heard their master's words. They knew that he never to be removed, and other customary tactics of the sort abandoned. None dared to protest. And, after that, the Conovers in the mandate some mysterious new manoeuvre of the Railroaders which they would triumphantly justify.

Meantime, Conover was working as never before. The very difficulty of the task in hand had made him more determined. He would have preferred to win without so much labor. But since his ordinary moves were of no avail, he would try the prospect of a bold and furious battle. That he would conquer, as always before, he did not at all doubt. He had already won a bargain with Alice Lanier, he had done so confident in his power to sweep down opposition. He had been so confident he had secretly despised the girl for having herself to be duped.

He, on his part, knew he must fore-

AMONG THE KABYLES.

THE OLDEST WHITE RACE OF THE WORLD AND ITS HOMES IN THE ATLAS MOUNTAINS.

MILLIONS of Rosy-Cheeked, Red-Haired, Blue-Eyed Africans—Their Odd Villages on the Mountain Tops—A Pen Picture of a Kabyle House and Farm—Where the Sheep and Donkeys Sleep With the People—A Land of Villages—Frank G. Carpenter Describes His Hundred-Mile Ride Through the Mountains of Grand Kabylia.

BY FRANK G. CARPENTER.

MAILLOT, ALGERIA, March 17.—Have you ever heard of the white race of the Atlas mountains? Its people have features like ours, and some of them have blue eyes and red hair. Many have rosy skins and complexions so fair that if dressed in European clothes they would not be out of place in London, Paris or New York. Others are darker, from their admixture with the Arabs and Moors, but they are still a people of their own kind, and strong enough to impress their brand on their offspring.

This race is scattered through the mighty mountains of Northwestern Africa. It is composed of the Berbers or Kabyles, who are numbered by millions and are found everywhere in these hills.

The Atlas mountains begin opposite the Canary Islands, well down the Atlantic coast, and run from southwest to northeast for a distance of more than 1,500 miles, ending near Cape Bon, below the Island of Sicily. They are longer than from Philadelphia to Omaha and wider than the distance between Washington and New York. The region altogether is more than one-seventh the size of the United States proper, and including the valleys it has a population of 15,000,000 or more.

Fully one-half of these people are made up of the descendants of this white race, and if we take the tribes which have left the mountains and come down into the lowlands and desert they will number still more. The Tuaregs, the fierce brigands of the Sahara, who wear black veils night and day, and scour the desert on horseback, robbing the caravans, are of Berber blood.

Here African sun darkens the lighter-hued Kabyles in the summer, and they take on the brown, rosy complexion of Italy, Spain and South France.

I have seen many of these fair-skinned Berbers or Kabyles since I came to the black continent some months ago. I met them first in Morocco and again in Spanish Africa, and I have spent the past week in Grand Kabylia, where they are almost the sole inhabitants, and have gone from village to village investigating their customs and photographing them at work and in their homes. Within the past three days I have ridden for more than a hundred miles through the wildest of these African mountains, crossing the Grand Atlas chain from Tizi-Ouzou to the capital of Kabylia, by way of Fort National and Michelet, over a pass almost as high as Mount Washington, and then coming down to this little town of Maillet, in the rich valley of the Tell, where I now am.

The road we took over the mountains covered a distance of about 170 kilometers. It was built by the French as a military highway to hold these people in order, and it is so smooth that one could go over it in an automobile. Indeed, I was offered an automobile for the trip at a cost of $25 per day, but I found that I should have to pay one day's return fare for every day I used the machine, making the cost really $50 per diem; there was also danger of a breakdown in the mountains, and I concluded to hire a carriage instead. This I got for $15 per day. It had an Arab driver and three horses hitched up abreast, and it enabled me to make my way leisurely from point to point, now stopping at a village and now at the little fields where the Kabyles were working.

Oldest White Race on Record.

The Berbers are the oldest white race upon record, and if we could trace our own forefathers back into the dark ages we should probably find that they are our cousins. They are supposed to have come here from Southern Europe, but, if so, it was when Europe was savage and when our ancestors were still eating with their fingers and sleeping on skins in the wilds of the forests.

Indeed, the Berbers were here when Athens was in its infancy and when Rome was yet to be born. There are records in the Egyptian temples dating as far back as 1,500 years before Christ, which speak of them as having rosy cheeks, blue eyes and red hair, and we find them fighting with the Phoenicians, the Carthaginians, the Romans, the Goths and the Vandals. They were conquered again and again, but they still retain their fastnesses in the Atlas and have kept their individuality to this day.

When the Arabs came, the Berbers were again overcome, and they adopted the Mohammedan religion, but they have modified it to suit themselves, and they have still their own ways and customs, as they had in the past. The Kabyle women do not veil their faces, and the men are satisfied to have but one wife. A large number, however, have been married with the alien race, and there are now among them many brown-skinned, dark-eyed people.

As we went through a deep cut which had been made for the road. All along the way are piles of broken stones, showing that the repairs are going on all the time, and there are guard houses at every few miles, where the men who take care of the road are stationed. This pass, in fact, is a military highway, and it enables France to control the whole region about.

The Kabyles are among the most interesting of the population of Algeria. Like the Swiss, they live in the mountains, and they have the same love of freedom. They submit to the French and work for them; but I am told that they hate them at heart, and that if France should have a great war with any other nation they would again break out into rebellion. This they did in 1871, when France had its war with Germany. At that time an army of these mountaineers marched on Algiers. They were defeated by the French, and since then no Kabyle or other native, except in certain wild districts, is allowed to have arms.

At Fort National I found a battalion of zouaves, about eight hundred strong, and the town itself is fortified in such a way that its guns command the many villages on the neighboring peaks. The road is so made that guns can be easily taken over it, and the many Kabyle towns, in view everywhere, can be shelled. On my way to Tizi-Ouzou I passed several regiments of French soldiers who were on the march, and I could easily see how an army of them with a road like this could keep the people in order.

I found most of the Kabyles friendly, and the contrast between them and their brothers in Morocco was striking. In Morocco every one carried a gun and I was not allowed to go into the mountains unless accompanied by soldiers.

The French Military Road.

This road over the Atlas is a wonderful piece of civil engineering. It goes along the sides of the cliffs and has been fairly cut out of the rocks. In places the drop to the valley below is something like 2,000 feet, and at times, when a caravan of camels passed by us, each beast loaded with two great, long bags of barley which tripled its width, we had to stop for fear we might be crowded over the rocks and dashed to pieces in the valley below.

At other places we met droves of donkeys, with their Kabyle owners had to bring down to single file in order to pass, and again companies of Kabyle natives, with loads on their backs, who walked the same way.

The road is a limestone pike, with frequent stone culverts and now and then bridges of stone and iron. Away up on the top of the Atlas there is a tunnel which has been blasted through the rock, and on the very top of the mountains there are many big orchards, but these are owned mostly by the French. They are walled off from the road by hedges of cactus, in which dried thorn bushes have been twisted, making a barrier impassable for man or beast. There are also olive orchards, and almost everywhere, even to high up in the mountains, are groves of wild olive trees, and now and then a forest of the evergreen oak, whose bark furnishes our cork.

Others of the mountains, especially the slopes facing the valley of the Tell, are covered with scrubby oaks, with leaves an inch long and of much the shape as those of a rose bush; they are light green in color. The trees are nothing like the grand oaks of America, but nevertheless they bear acorns and furnish food for numerous hogs.

Many of the trees are trimmed of their branches every year in order that the twigs and limbs may be used for fuel. I am told that it is against the law to cut the trees down to the ground, and that most of the charcoal and firewood of Algeria are made from these switches. They are used by the bakers, and the bread of a great part of Algeria is baked with them.

As one climbs up the Atlas mountains the views widen so that the whole world seems spread out below. One can see so far that such mountains as the Alps are dwarfed by the mighty panoramas. The rugged hills stretch away for hundreds of miles on every side, and in the winter, when the Atlas is covered with snow, the views must be, beyond expression, magnificent. I saw one sunset at the very top of the pass, which will remain in my memory as among the most wonderful of the cloud paintings of my life. During the day the sirocco had been blowing its hot blast from the desert, and the sun had been hidden. When it set the sky was full of clouds, and it glided them in a hundred rose hues.

We were high up in the sky, with great masses of fleecy gold above and below us. The mountains took on all tints and shades, and their sides became a patchwork of many colors, which we saw through a thin veil of gold. On other hills the veil was a delicate lavender, and on others a snow white tinged with rose pink. As the sun disappeared a band of royal purple ran around these mountain peaks, resting below them, while there were bands of burning copper above and below.

The most striking feature of the whole of these Atlas scenes is the human interest which shines out of every picture. The Kabyle villages are everywhere. There are thousands of them in the Algerian mountains. Every great hilltop is spotted with them, and they call all the lower peaks. The people build right on the tops of the hills. Their little huts are of stone and plaster, with roofs of red tile. The walls are whitewashed, and every town makes a great patch of white and red on the landscape.

The villages are usually far off the road, and are reached only by mule paths. I climbed up and visited some of them. One was entered by a gate forming a sort of landing place for the mule tracks. Here in the Atlas, as in the rest of the world, the streets with no pavements of any kind, are all of one story, and look more like stables than homes. The doors are rude, although some have carved upon them. They enter into a court upon which are sometimes two houses, the walls of both facing the street. The average house is about fifteen feet square; it has a ridge roof, which is seldom more than twelve feet in height at the comb. Here in the Atlas these roofs are of red tile, and in other places they are of thatch.

The houses are entered from the court by doors as rough as those which face the street. They are absolutely without ornamentation. They have no windows, and, with the exception of a little hole about a foot square under the roof at one end, no light but that which comes in at the door.

In a Berber Home.

Let me give you a picture of one of these Berber homes which I visited yesterday. My dragoman, Emmanuel Zammit, who speaks the Kabyle language, acted as my interpreter, and through him the owner gave us permission to enter. We had tried at several other houses, but the women ran from us as though we had the plague, and the boys slammed the court doors in our faces.

Like all Mohammedans, the Kabyles are jealous, and their women will have nothing to do with strange men. In this case both husband and wife were at home, and the man was more liberal than most of his kind. He did not introduce us to his wife, but she was with him in the hut, and, as usual, unveiled. She had a baby at her breast, and there were a half dozen small children sprawling over the floor. Indeed, we had to step carefully at first for fear of trampling a baby, but as our eyes became accustomed to the darkness we got along very well.

In this house there was no sign of what we call furniture. There were neither chairs nor tables. The members of the family were sitting around a pile of furs which they were sorting as we entered. They sit on the floor and eat squatting about the single bowl which usually contains the main dish of each meal. They eat with wooden spoons, using a common knife. They eat most things with their fingers, and often break up bread and soak it in the soup or stew. They have meat about once a week, but their chief diet consists of fruit and of bread made of wheat or other grain. They grind their meal themselves, and in the family mill and sometimes in one belonging to the village in common.

In a little home like this the winter supplies of the family are stored. One of the receptacles I noticed was a stone jar for figs, with a hole in the bottom to allow the juice to run out; another was a larger vessel of the same material for wheat or corn. The latter would hold perhaps twenty bushels. There was also a large clay jar for the olive oil, which is made on the little home farm and pressed out by the family.

I asked where the cooking was done, and in reply the woman pointed to a hole in the floor in one corner of the hut. The floor is the bare rock, so that there is no danger of fire. As I looked about me I heard a sheep bleating. It was apparently right under my feet, and turning around I saw a long-eared ram and a nannygoat looking at me from under a shelf at the back of the hut. This shelf was the chief sleeping place of the family and the space below it served as a stable. There were some chickens in the same place, and at night the donkeys and other animals belonging to the family are brought in and all sleep together. These Kabyle sheep are tame, and they follow their masters from place to place like dogs. The people have many sheep, which they pasture on the mountains in one common flock watched by a shepherd. The sheep and goats are brought into town every night. As soon as they enter the village each runs for its own home and remains there until morning.

The Pretty Berber Girls.

Some of these Kabyle women are fine looking. The wife of my host was about twenty, and she would have been considered pretty in any crowd of American maidens. Her cheeks were rosy, and her features as regular as those of the Venus de Medici. She wore a dress of bright red calico which came almost to her feet, but still showed the heavy silver rings about her bare ankles. She had heavy earrings and bracelets. Around her neck was a chain to which many ornaments were hung, and her breast was covered with great pins of white metal set with bright-colored stones. I venture that she had at least two pounds of jewelry upon her. Her eyelids were blackened to add to her beauty, and the man was tattooed on the cheeks and on the forehead and chin.

Nearly all the Kabyle women I have seen are tattooed, and even the poorest wear more or less jewelry. Outside this, many are ragged, and those who go through the forest in their shirts are so pulled up that they show a large expanse of bare calf. I see them doing all sorts of hard labor. They carry water from the village well in clay jars; they gather the wood needed for cooking, and not a few labor out in the fields. Indeed their situation makes one think of the vaudeville song:

"Oh, the women do the work, do the work, while the men lie around the house." Or that other sweet and well-known ditty:

"Everybody works but father."

The Kabyle men are a strange combination of thriftiness and laziness. I saw many of them loafing about the streets, while the women passed by loaded with all sorts of burdens. When at home they let their wives do as much as they will, but at the same time they will hire out to the French farmers of the Tell to aid in planting and harvesting the crop. At such times they make from forty to sixty cents a day, and save almost the whole of it. They are accumulative, and many of them amass small fortunes of a few hundred dollars or so.

Indeed, these people have many qualities which distinguish them from the Arabs and Moors, by whom they are surrounded. Their white blood crops out in their desire for independence and self-government. They are ruled by the French, but as to local matters they govern themselves. Each town is a little republic, with its own council and a public meeting house where towns affairs are discussed. It has its own municipal laws and elects its own officials. Each village has a mosque and a school. The school is supplied with teachers by the French, and the children are taught to speak and write French as well as Arabic. The mosques are rude affairs, but the Kabyles go to them regularly and face Mecca as they pray. They are naturally religious, but they have changed the Mohammedan faith to suit themselves, and they have their own ideas of morals, right and wrong. Many of them are intelligent, and altogether they have most of the qualities which have made the white race the ruling one in other parts of the world.

RELIEVING HIS FEELINGS.

CHAIRMAN Shonts, of the Panama Canal Commission, was pointing out the necessity of amusement for the workmen on the huge canal.

"Nothing breaks up the health and cures the spirit like monotony," he said. "The monotony of every workman's life must be pleasantly varied, or the poor fellow will be unable to work well."

He smiled.

"A young lady recently took a post as governess in a rich New York family," he said. "The residence of this family was magnificent. The young lady was especially impressed by the footman who stood in the hall. 'This footman was tall and robust and shapely. He wore a glittering tuxedo, with knee-breeches and brown silk stockings, and standing in the hall, opening the door or conducting visitors to the drawing-room, he was a stately and grand and solemn picture. His face was as expressionless as a statue's. He was as stiff and unbending as a lamp-post.'"

"I tell you, in the family's absence, the new governess beard down stairs a most hideous din—shouts, yells and shrieks, as though a couple of maniacs had broken loose and fallen to fighting."

"As she listened nervously, a maid hurried upstairs, entered her room, and said: 'Don't be scared, Miss. It's only the footman. When everybody is out he always shouts and hollers so. He says he can't help it. It relieves his feelings.'"

AN ASPHALT LAKE.

"THERE are blue lakes and silver lakes, but an asphalt lake is the best of all," said a contractor.

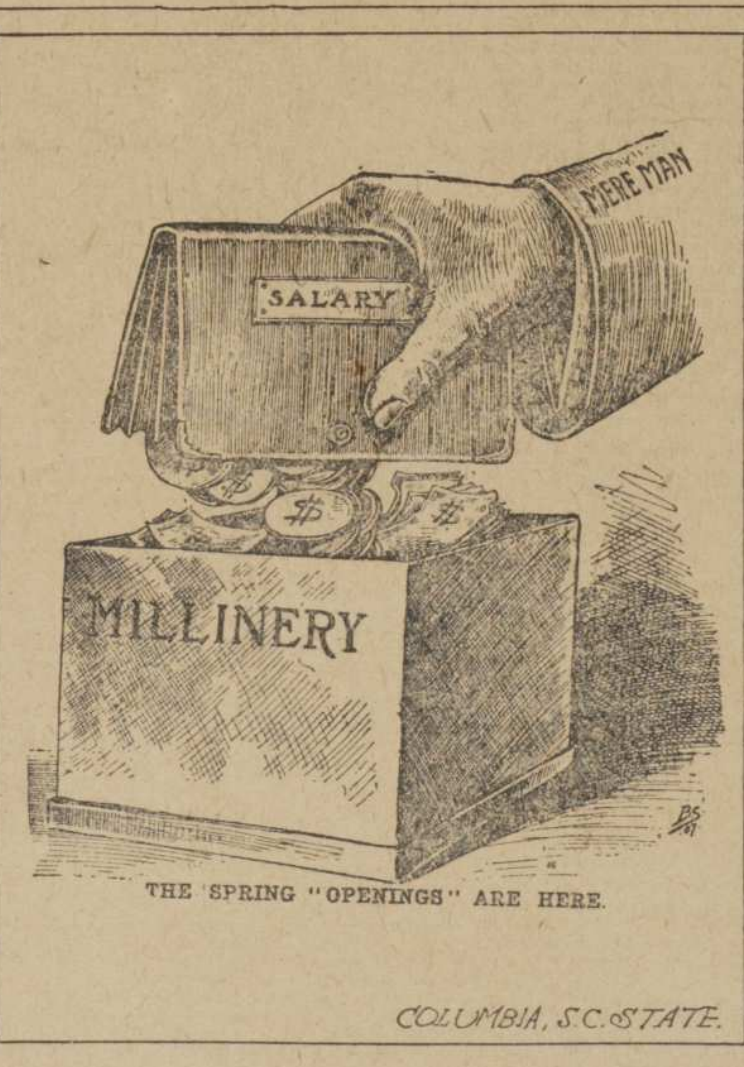

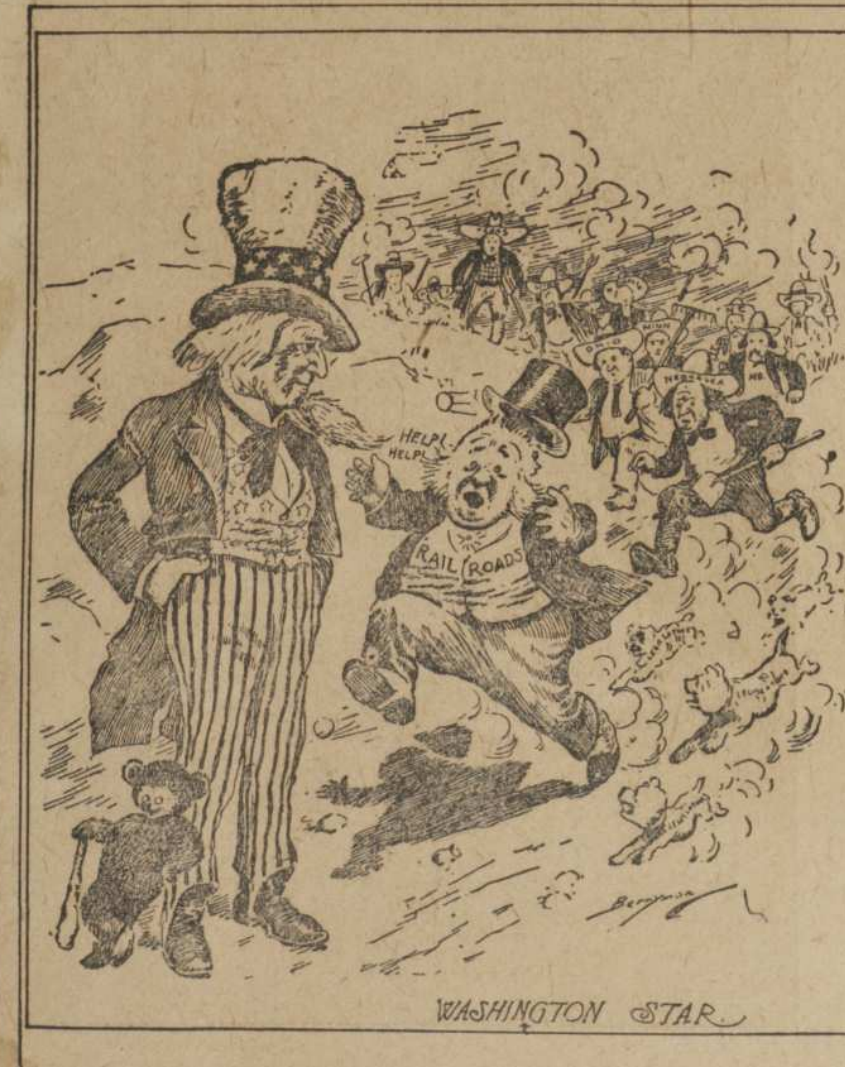

"I visited the famous asphalt lake of Trinidad," it looks like a great black swamp surrounded with a fringe of cocoanut palms. A little railway runs across it, and men stand in it working, some on asphalt firm enough to support them, some on asphalt in which they keep sinking down an inch or two a minute, some on asphalt so soft it is like quicksand.

"The stuff looks like a cross between black mud and pitch. The lake is 110 acres in size, and its depth is tremendous. The thick asphalt, mixed with water, moves a little, and now and then an old tree comes slowly up from the depths. The men work with pickaxes, digging out the asphalt in lumps the size of pumpkins."

"An asphalt lake is the rarest and most valuable kind to own. I would rather own one than either Como, Maggiore, Geneva or Lucerne."

MOTHER'S STORY.

The cold north wind howled mournfully around the corners of the house and the snow was banked in drifts on the window-sills. We had gathered around the bright-glowing embers and were watching the shadows as they danced on the walls and ceiling, when little Edgar climbed up into mother's lap and asked for a story.

"Well, what kind shall it be?" she asked, looking down at Herman, who was sitting at her feet.

"Make it a Christmas story, mother," he answered, giving her shoestrings a jerk.

"Well," she began, "a stormy Christmas eve a little boy was trudging along the street with his hand in his empty pockets wondering how he could get his little blind brother a Christmas present, when he was halted by a man on the opposite side of the street.

"Sonny, will you help me carry my valises to the depot?"

"Yes, sir. What depot do you want to go to?" he asked, picking up one of the valises.

"To the Pennsylvania, and we'll have to hurry, for the train leaves in fifteen minutes."

"All right, sir, we'll get there in ten minutes," he answered with a grunt, starting down the street.

"Well, my lad, what do you think you'll get for Christmas?" the gentleman asked, after he had walked a short distance in silence.

"I ain't goin' to get nothin'; pappy's sick and it takes all the money we can make to pay the rent and buy things to eat, so we can't get no candy nor presents. I don't care about myself, but I want to get my little brother something. You see, he's blind and can't go out and play with the other boys, and it will be so lonesome for him to stay in the house all day Christmas without any presents."

"How old is your brother, Johnny?" the gentleman asked, very interested.

"Oh, he's five years old, he's six in June, so if I can't get him a Christmas present I'll get him a birthday present."

They had arrived at the depot and the boy set his valise down and rubbed his cold, cramped hand in which he had carried the valise. The gentleman opened his pocketbook, took out a crisp dollar bill and handed it to the boy, saying:

"My lad, I only intended to give you a quarter for your service. But I'm glad to know that you love your little blind brother and I'm glad that I can help you a little. Take the money, get your brother and yourself a present. Well, my boy, the train has come and I must go; may your heart remain as it is tonight, unselfish, kind and generous. Protect your blind brother and try and make this a merry Christmas."

The train thundered away, the boy gazed after it with a happy tear on each cheek.

AN AVERTED FATE.

The beautiful new French doll set on the mantle beside the old one, with her arms outstretched and a sweet smile on her pink and white face. She smoothed her satin dress and glanced somewhat playfully at the blue muslin one beside her. The rag doll beamed upon the muslin, and it was a thing of beauty and daintiness. It was a Christmas present from the little girl's mother, and it was to be her best for the coming year.

And the French doll, rustling her stiff petticoats, peeped into the full stocking at the corner of the fireplace, and de scribed conversation, inquired "What's your name?"

The rag doll looked up with a discontented expression heightened by the downward stroking of her palm o' mouth, and answered briefly "Elizabeth Ann."

"I don't care for all those things," snapped Elizabeth Ann, and she added more softly, "I am contented with be ng Louise's darlinest doll."

"I am going to take your place," said Louise's mother.

Antoinette, sympathizingly, "but one must expect, when one becomes old and ugly, to be replaced by a more charming newcomer."

"You shan't take my place!" cried Elizabeth Ann, "my mistress shall never love you and forget me. I will break your grinning face, and then you shan't make fun of me."

She gave mademoiselle a great push and as she fell with a crash a smile of triumph spread over the withered countenance of the rag doll, but it vanished and the same soiled lines of six years of careless handling reappeared as daylight came, and with the awakening of Louise.

She sprang with a cry of delight to the old darling, not noticing the gay dress and shattered head on the hark, when her mother came in she exclaimed, regretfully:

"It was my carelessness in putting her so close to the edge," and added, glancing toward her daughter, "Louise will be so disappointed."

But that small person who sat in her little chair was holding Elizabeth Ann in her arms, cradling a lullaby.

A Valentine Story.

It was dreadful to have to go to school on the fourteenth of February. This is what little Helen thought as she walked to school through the falling snow. Mother had put up her lunch and told Helen not to open it until noon. She was taking her lunch because mother said it was too cold to come home.

The morning dragged slowly by. At last it was noon, and Helen's best friend, Frances, was calling to her to come on and eat lunch. When Helen opened her lunch, they both jumped with surprise, for there were two beautiful valentines. On the back of one was "For Helen from Mamma," on the other one was "For Frances, from Mrs. White."

There were dainty heart-shaped sandwiches, cookies cut heart-shaped, and bonbons the same shape. Their teacher, Miss Tremont, opened the valentine box, that afternoon and Helen received many pretty and comely valentines.

After school Helen had to go to Aunt Mary's house for a book her mother had asked her to get. Unfortunately Frances had been told to come straight home, so Helen went on her errand alone. An hour later, when she reached home feeling very tired she ran up the steps, the front door opened and Helen's best friends came running up to her. She was so surprised and happy.

The children were soon invited out to the dining room, which was prettily decorated with red and white hearts. After supper the children played various games in the library. It was nine o'clock the children left, leaving Helen tired but happy. VIVIAN CANADAY, Mayfield, Ky.

My Pet Dog.

My pet dog is so smart that she will pull me in my little wagon. She has been my constant companion for several years, as no children were near me.

Lady Bug is my little dog's name. She has one little pup. It is brown. The train thundered away, the boy gazed after it with a happy tear on each cheek.

AN AVERTED FATE.

The beautiful new French doll set on the mantle beside the old one, with her arms outstretched and a sweet smile on her pink and white face. She smoothed her satin dress and glanced somewhat playfully at the blue muslin one beside her. The rag doll beamed upon the muslin, and it was a thing of beauty and daintiness. It was a Christmas present from the little girl's mother, and it was to be her best for the coming year.

And the French doll, rustling her stiff petticoats, peeped into the full stocking at the corner of the fireplace, and de scribed conversation, inquired "What's your name?"

The rag doll looked up with a discontented expression heightened by the downward stroking of her palm o' mouth, and answered briefly "Elizabeth Ann."

"I don't care for all those things," snapped Elizabeth Ann, and she added more softly, "I am contented with be ng Louise's darlinest doll."

"I am going to take your place," said Louise's mother.

THE YOUNG CRUSOE.

[Copyright, 1907, by Lathrop, Lee & Shep.]

BY CLINTON SCOLLARD.

Now that the sweet flowers sleep
Where the snow is drifted deep,
And the chill winds roar and rust
So I may not play without O'er fanciful seas I fare,
And gleefully rise and dip
With the waves in my mimic ship,
Till my bark is wrecked on the strand
Of a lonely ocean land.

And then, like a workman skilled,
But of looks a bit I find
In the nook behind the couch
Where I lurk with gun and pouch,
That no hungry savage there
May surprise me unaware.
I say my playmate Jim
Out I rush and capture him,
Overjoyed in heart to find
A Friday to suit my mind.

All around our tale we stray
And hunt through the golden day
But when day's bright eye is shut
Then we seek my sistered hut
And sleep with our guns in hand
Till morning greets the land.
And at last, from the lonely shore,
Just as Crusoe did of yore,
I sail o'er the briny main
And arrive at home again.

A BUSINESS GIRL.

In Naples there is a girl eleven years old in the fruit business, and she is doing so well that she employs twelve men and boys. She began in her father's fruit stand at six years old. She is now accounted one of the shapeliest buyers in the trade, and it is predicted that by the time she is fifteen she will be one of the richest. She cannot read or write, but has to sign her name by making an X. Several fruit dealers have been fined in court for trying to injure her business.

The Bound Girl.

A Story of Colonial Times.

BY MARY E. WILKINS.

HIS indenture Witnesseth, That I, Margaret Burjost, of Boston, in the County of Suffolk and Province of Massachusetts Bay, in New England, Have placed, and by these presents do bind out my only Daughter, whose name is Ann Ginnins, to be an apprentice unto Samuel Wales and his wife, of Braintree, in the aforesaid Blacksmith.

Signed, sealed and delivered in the presence of SAM VAUGHAN, Mary BURGIS, MARY VAUGHAN, her X mark.

They had been revolving this scheme of taking a "bound girl" for some time in their minds, and Samuel Wales' gossip in Boston, wife Polly, he had requested to keep a lookout for a suitable person.

So, the word came that one had been found. Mr. Wales had started at once for the city. When he saw the child, he was dismayed.

He expected to see a girl of ten; this one was hardly five, and she had anything but the demure and decorous which his Puritan wife had so earnestly requested to keep a lookout for a suitable person.

The minute he saw the child, he felt a disapproval of her rise in his heart, and also something akin to terror. He dreaded to take this odd-looking child home, and his wife Polly, he foresaw, would crowd out to the great astonishment of the Wales' cows, who stared over their high rails and moved uneasily.

Ann drove the Belcher cows home and ushered them into Samuel Wales' barnyard with speed. Then she went to her grandmother. The table looked beautiful. When she saw Mr. Wales come in, glance her way, and then call his wife out, she knew perfectly what Mr. Wales was saying out there.

It was this: "That little imp has driven home all Neighbor Belcher's cows instead of ours. What's going to be done with her, Polly?"

She knew what the answer would be, too. Mrs. Polly was a peremptory woman.

Back Ann had to go with the Belcher cows, she never disturbed them again, and drove her master's home. She was hustled off to bed then without any of that beautiful supper that she had just crept into her bed in the small, unfurnished room upstairs, where she slept, and was lying there sobbing when she heard a slow, stumbling step on the stairs. Then the door opened, and Mrs. Descon Thomas came in.

"There—child," said she, "here's a piece of sweet cake and a couple of simnels that I managed to save out for you. Joe's set right up and eat 'em, and don't ever be so dretful naughty again, or I don't know what will become of you."

This reproof, tempered with sweetness, had a salutary effect on Ann. She thereupon ate the sweet cake and simnels, and sobbed out her contrition to grandma, and there was a marked improvement in her conduct for some days.

Ann did not have to work enough to hurt her. The thought of the indenture securely locked up in Mr. Wales' tall wooden desk was forever in Ann's mind. Half by dint of questioning various people, half by her own natural logic, she had settled it within herself, that at any time the possession of these papers when she heard a slow, stumbling step on the stairs. was always locked—it held other documents more valuable than hers—and Samuel Wales carried the key in his waistcoat pocket.

She went to a dame's school three months every year. Samuel Wales carried half a cord of wood to pay for her schooling, and she learned to write and read in the New England Primer. Next to her, on the split bench, sat a little girl named Hannah French. The two became fast friends.

When Ann told her what a long stint she had to do before school Hannah would shed sympathizing tears.

Ann, after a solemn promise of secrecy, told her about the indentures one day. Hannah listened with round, serious eyes; her brown hair was combed smoothly down over her ears. She was a veritable little Puritan damsel if itself.

"If I could only get the papers, I wouldn't have to mind her and work so hard," said Ann.

Hannah's eyes grew rounder. "Why, it would be sinful to take them!" said she.

Ann's cheeks blazed under her wondering gaze, and she said no more.

When she was about eleven years old, one day January, Hannah wanted her to go out and play on the ice after school. They had been out, but it was too late to go.

Ann went home and asked Mrs. Polly's permission with a beating heart; she promised to do a double stint the next day if she would let her go. But her mistress was inexorable—work before play, she said, always.

Ann was disappointed, but she did not forget that she was to be brought up to work; it was different with her from what it was with Hannah French.

Even this she meant kindly enough, but Ann saw Hannah go away, and sat down to do her spinning with more defiance in her heart; they both had even been there before. She had been unusually good, too, lately. She always was during the three months schooling with solemn, gentle little Hannah French.

She had been spinning sulkily a while, and it was almost dark, when a messenger came for her master and mistress to go directly to Deacon Thomas Wales', her master's father, who had been suddenly taken ill.

Ann would have felt sorry if she had not been so angry. Deacon Wales was almost as much of a favorite of hers as his wife. As it was, the principal thing she thought of, after Mr. Wales and his wife were gone, was that the key was in the desk. However, it happened, there it was. She hesitated a moment. She was all alone in the kitchen, and her heart was in a tumult of anger, but she had learned her lessons from the Bible and the New England Primer, and she was afraid of the sin. But, at last, she opened the desk, found the indentures, and hid them in a little pocket which she wore inside her waist, under her petticoat.

Then she threw her blanket over her head and got her poppet out of the chest. The poppet was a little doll manufactured from a corn-cob, dressed in an indigo-colored gown. Grandmother made it for her, and it was her chief treasure. She clasped it tight to her bosom and ran across lots to Hannah French's.

Hannah saw her coming, and met her at the door.

"I've brought you my poppet," whispered Ann, all breathless, "and you must keep her always, and not let her work too hard. I'm going away."

Hannah's eyes looked like two solemn moons. "Where are you going, Ann?"

"I'm going to Boston to find my own mother. She said nothing about the indentures to Hannah—somehow she could not."

Hannah could not say much, she was so astonished, but she knew that Ann had gone, scudding across the fields, she was bright moonlight and two solemn moons. "Where are you going, Ann?"

Carried Away to Sea.

The Adventures of a Crusoe Boy.

CHAPTER IV.

WHEN Joe Carney came to realize that he had been plotted against and trapped, and that he was helpless to do anything in the matter, it was only natural that he should feel very indignant and defiant. Plenty of men have been kidnapped in the same manner he was, and have set out to make trouble for the captain of the ship, but they have made more trouble for themselves instead. Once got a man or boy aboard ship and out at sea, and the captain can use him as he will.

Having lived in a sea port and had many a talk with sailors, Joe knew this and it was well for him that he did. He began his duties at once and gave Captain White no excuse to punish him. He acted as cabin boy and ship's boy and assistant to the cook, and he had been a week at sea before he made a friend among the crew. The whitemen were all strangers to him, but they were good fellows, and each other when they came aboard. At least half of them had never been to sea before, and these men were terribly seasick for the first three or four days. The only advice Joe could give them was to eat and drink as much as they could, and to lie down when they were sick. He had been a sailor's son, and he was used to sea sickness.

It was only on the afternoon of the last day that the mate ordered him to the South Atlantic, taking quite a number of whales and all aboard keeping their breath. Then she ran into the port of Bahia for a supply of vegetables and fresh water, and remained for a week. Then men were allowed to go ashore. He respectfully refused the pressing of a mission to go with them.

CORRESPONDENCE PAGE OF FASHIONS & BEAUTY

Tub Frocks and Washable Fabrics Will Be in Strong Favor.

THE wise virgin of needle and thimble will start at once upon the buying of wash fabrics and the making of washable suits and frocks. This promises to be an unusual season for washable raiment of all sorts and already the stocks in the better class of shops have been picked over and the choicest offerings gleaned by early buyers.

Two-piece suits of wash fabrics will be divided into two distinct classes, the tailored coat suits and the elaborate bolero, Eton and cape costumes. With both of these two-piece suits the separate lingerie blouse will be worn. Some of the smartest tailored linen suits show three pieces; skirt, shirt waist and tailored coat, but with the more fussy short-jacket suits, blouses of lace, exquisite embroidery and ornate needlework will be used.

For the linen tailored suit, straight lines prevail; the stitched and plaited skirt takes precedence, while long-sleeved, box-shaped coats are the usual choice. The three-quarter sleeve or shorter is seen with the dressy costumes and the circular skirt as often as its plaited sister.

In the matter of linens for tailored suits, plain white and natural tone seem to lead, but many beautiful colors are shown, onion brown, smoke grey, old blue, pale raspberry and chartreuse, sulphur, tan and ecru. Vivid green and lavender seem to have fallen into the rear. Pique is extremely popular for tailored suits, and comes in a plain, fine-cord weave, in cross bar or checks, and with dots or tiny figures. A lightweight pique is really cooler than linen, takes starch well and is easier to iron.

Handkerchief linen and other sheer fabrics form the foundation for the more elaborate two-piece suits with their almost invisible jackets, invisible because of the wealth of trimming.

Shirt waist suits will be more popular than ever, and for these the offerings of wash fabric are bewilderingly beautiful, and prices are most reasonable. Unquestionably, while plain colors will show up to best advantage in the two-piece suit, for separate skirts and shirt waist suits plaids, checks, stripes and small figures in color contrasts will be much worn.

In selecting your fabric, think first of your laundry facilities. If your laundry work is done at home and you can keep upon it a watchful eye, you may indulge in some of the beautiful color schemes. If you must trust to the steam laundry or an outside worker who may or may not study the effects of soap and sun on your colored fabrics, stick to white, and give the touch of color in cravat, belt, etc.

The vogue for cross-bar designs is responsible for some of the most effective patterns. Big black cross bars on white or tinted grounds are broken by roses that are very natural looking. Stripes, at this early hour, seem to be ahead of checks, but the latter are plentiful enough to show a firm standing in popular estimation. The cotton voiles that have figured so conspicuously for several seasons are more plentiful than ever, and come in all the effects found among the dress' stuffs—plain, checked, plaided, striped, flowered, dotted, etc. The best of these voiles have more body than last season, and promise to be less crushable. The dimities are "doing themselves proud." Instead of having vertical cords, as formerly, the cords not only stripe them but cross-check and cross-bar them in no end of ways, and then over them are printed the loveliest floral patterns that the makers of dimity have ever turned out. Stenciled efforts are seen in some of the new linens and cottons.

Plaid designs will be much worn this season. Those suitable, in tissue zephyr and Swiss. Some have a sail-finished bar, others show the bar in a contrasting color. The dimensions of the plaid are from half an inch to five inches. When making the waist these plaids can be so arranged as to give the small waist and full-chest effect. These plaids are also suitable for entire dresses for house and street use, and for children's wear. Mercerized cotton taffeta in the Scotch plaid colorings is an excellent material for children's dresses. The most beautiful plaids for women come in the French or pastel colorings, the colors being mingled on a white ground, as, for instance, pink, green and black; blue, etc.

In case of death in a family where you have a mere acquaintance, you leave cards with the servant who attends the door at the house of mourning. One card is left for each adult surviving member of the family. If you have enjoyed the friendship of any member of the family, you may call, if your intimacy justifies this, or, better still, write a brief note expressing only your regret and sympathy, but no reference to extraneous domestic or social matters is permissible.

The art of writing these various letters and notes gracefully is well worth cultivation. It is a mark of good breeding and often paves the way to social success.

PRUDENCE STANDISH.

If perplexed in matters of Dress, Beauty or Etiquette, write Miss Dean, Miss Morton or Miss Standish, inclosing a self-addressed and stamped envelope for reply. This is a quicker method than having your question answered in the columns of the paper. Besides, you receive a personal, intimate answer. Be careful to address your return envelope accurately. Letters come back to us every day, stamped "insufficient address" or "party cannot be found."

beige and black, and green, beige and brown.

Cotton batiste is a material suitable for house gowns and shirt waists. This comes in barred, striped, dotted and ringed designs upon a white ground, and costs fifteen cents a yard.

For children's wear there is nothing more charming for general use than the shepherd's check zephyrs, which come in fast color at from twenty-five to thirty-five cents a yard.

Among the thin silk and cotton mixtures there are hosts of very attractive novelties. Some of them come from Japan, some from France and others were woven here. Of the Japanese representatives an attractive collection is in gun metal effects spattered with Jacquard figures of the same tone which would be useful for the older members of the family in comfortable and smart summer frocks. The self-made material comes plain, in white or lovely colors, and also in fancy patterns.

Coin-spotted cottons will make up prettily for the shirt waist suits intended for street wear. They closely resemble in design foulard silks, as they come in blue grounds with white spots, and ecru grounds with lavender, pink or blue spots.

Separate duck, linen and pique skirt models already put forward are merely variations upon familiar plaited models, with, in many cases, groups of wide or narrow bands around the bottom. In the linen costumes one often finds a box plait center front, fine tucks or plaits letting the skirt fullness into the band around the hips and either bands or deep tucks running around the sides and back of the skirt, these being set at rather wide intervals, and the highest of the four or five used being well above the knee. Less simple linen costumes, of course, have all sorts of elaborate devices in trimming, hand embroidery, inset motifs of embroidery and lace, etc.

The use of fine clumsy insertions of narrow widths to outline or join seams, hems, etc., is more pronounced than ever in lingerie frocks and blouses, and immense quantities of clumsy edges and insertions in all widths are being sold. Nothing will be more modish for the trimming of the simple wash frock than clumsy, relieved at the throat and wrists by valenciennes.

Crocheted ornaments and narrow insertions for joining skirt gores are once more in vogue, and the woman who is left with her crochet needle can give her home-made frock an imported air by employing this very fine insertion on the skirt, and the medallions to ornament jacket or blouse.

Heavy machine embroidery, particularly Hamburg work in English eyelet patterns, is used for making collars, cuffs and pocket flaps on pique or linen suits. Some young women who have time to baste on collars, reverses and cuffs after wash day use velvet in a contrasting color for this purpose. For instance, a stunning linen coat suit in ecru has collar, cuffs and lapels of scarlet velvet overlaid with guipure lace. But on the whole the washable cuffs, collars, etc., are better, and give a more summery look to the costume.

Pony coats are much liked for youthful figures, box coats are girlish, but the middle-aged woman looks best of all in the Eton or bolero cut to exactly the right length to suit her figure. Remember that if you are short and chubby, you must avoid round or very square finish for your bolero, or Eton, and gain long, rather pointed effects in cut and trimming.

Baked Bananas.

BANANAS count among the cheap fruits, of which the average family is a bit tired by the end of the winter season. The fruit holds many possibilities, however, when offered cooked instead of raw. Here is a good recipe for baked bananas: Remove the skins from six bananas, which are not quite ripe, and cut them into pieces of rather more than half an inch in thickness. Melt three ounces of fresh butter in a baking dish, add a teaspoonful of lemon juice and some salt, pepper and nutmeg, then put in the cut bananas, coat them well with butter, cover them closely with buttered paper and cook them in a fairly quick oven for from fifteen to twenty minutes. When ready they should be quite soft and yet unbroken.

VOGUE OF TINY RUFFLES

Grandma's Frills Again In Fashion.

THE narrow, plaited frill with which our grandmothers edged their bridal lingerie is back again, but not for lingerie alone. It is the dominating decoration for shirt waists and more elaborate bodices.

In England it has never gone out and at all the fashionable white goods shops it sells ready made, with plain hemmed or hemstitched finish or very narrow lace by the yard or bolt. Some of the lace used on this imported ruffling is no more than a quarter of an inch in depth. For all tailored waists and for frocks made of very sheer material or soft silk, however, the ruffling is hand made and of the same fabric.

For furnishing last year's shirt waists this knife-plaited ruffling is invaluable. For instance, on the plain tailored shirt, opening in the front, you will find either separate or attached waist seems to be a rather broad box plait running down the center with one-inch ruffling on either edge. If the front plait is sewed down you can rip it and insert the ruffling, or you can cover the old plait with a strap simulating a box plait and finished on either side with the frills. Sometimes this front piece shows the plaited finish and the collar and cuffs are plain. Again the turn-over collar and turn-back cuffs will be edged with ruffling to match the plait. A very pretty detached set shows a straight collar with narrow ruffling top and bottom, straight bands to be attached with gold bar pins to the cuffs, edged on either side with plaiting, and a long, straight stock of matching material coming to a point just above the waist line and edged on sides and pointed end with ruffling.

Very few Peter Pan waists are seen this year, but those offered show plaited ed frills around the broad turn-over collar and cuffs. If you want to wear Peter Pan waists left from last year be sure to add this new touch of ruffling.

On silk waists the tiny ruffling appears in the form of the same material, velvet ribbon or dainty lace. A very pretty English model (and some of our most demure and girlish designs come from English shops) is developed in pale tan colored messaline silk. It closes in the front invisibly, the fastening being hidden by a broad box plait, edged with inch-wide Oriental lace, which is one of the finer net laces. Down from the shoulder on either side run three side plaits less than an inch in width, turned out. These are graduated so that the outside plaits are the shortest, measuring about five or six inches. Each of these plaits is finished with matching Oriental lace in a narrower width, about three-quarters of an inch. The elbow sleeves are finished with a straight cuff of stitched and tucked silk, edged on either side with the narrower lace.

A very pretty brettelette of golden brown velvet ribbon to wear over a natural colored pongee silk blouse was edged all the way round with a fine net lace. Equally effective was a net trimmed with guipure lace medallions, the latter outlined by fine ruffles of golden brown velvet. All the ruffling has the effect of knife plaiting and lies very flat.

A hollow-necked girl will find this design for a blouse most effective. Make your jumper waist of finely checked or figured gingham or zephyr cloth. For the square yoke select all-over embroidery or fine tucking. Outline the yoke with straps of the gingham or zephyr cloth, shirred or tucked, shirring being best to fill up hollows. These straps look like the old-fashioned puffs admired by our grandmothers, and they can be ironed very easily if folded through the middle, ironed like a double ruffle and then fluted out by rubbing the finger under them. Either side of these straps should be outlined with flat, narrow ruffling. The straps which mark the lower edge of the yoke, back and front, are finished plain at each end, and overlaid with straps which come over the shoulder, finished in either curved or pointed ends, all outlined by the fine ruffling. Another frilled effect desirable for the very thin woman is the surplice or triple brettelette made of graduated ruffles. These ruffles are shaped and are quite broad over the shoulders and tapering at the waist line to a half-inch depth.

All the shaped straps for outlining oval, round or pointed yokes are edged with ruffling, and many very dressy effects are thus obtained. For instance, on a white wash frock of plain linen the heart-shaped yoke was made of all-over embroidery simulating an English eyelet pattern. This was outlined by a shaped strap of plain linen, edged with embroidery to match the all-over work.

Vests are outlined with plaitings turned in, and revers show the same finish, with the plaiting turned out. A word as to laundering these flat plaitings. Before sending any garments to the wash, you must go over it carefully and baste the plaitings into shape, one row of basting at the edges and a second row about the middle of the ruffle or plaiting. This is the only sure way of having the plaited effect remain intact. Without the basting, the laundress will either iron out the ruffles straight or attempt to crimp them, giving them a fluted or plaited look.

Little Cures For Aches and Pains.

PAIN, however small, an ailment, however trifling, will cause wrinkles. The woman who would avoid lines around her mouth and under her eyes, and seams in her forehead, should, as far as possible, avoid pain. The contortion of the features, when forcing herself to work or walk, in spite of pain, cannot fail to write the first marks of age, wrinkles and lines.

It is remarkable how many women will endure some slight ailment because they have not time or patience to take proper care of themselves. It is not always necessary to visit a doctor or a specialist; just a little common sense will do the work. For instance, watch a woman who has a corn or an ingrown toenail. At every step the muscles of her face contract just a little. A month of this will cause a good deep wrinkle. If you do not know a reliable chiropodist, treat your own feet.

For an ingrowing toenail, scrape or file the nail with nail file or emery braid down the middle, not crosswise, but up and down, until the nail through the center is quite thin, then in the effort to fill out this space the nail will grow toward the center of the toe and away from the sides, where the pain is. Pack under the nail where it is cutting into the skin a bit of absorbent cotton wet with boracic acid or listerine or a lotion composed of two parts of glycerine to one part of carbolic acid in solution. This will prevent poison setting in.

Here is a good corn lotion: Salicylic acid, 1 gramme; tincture of Cannabis Indica 1/2 gramme; alcohol, 90 per cent., 1 gramme; ether, 65 per cent., 2 1/2 grammes; collodion elastique, 5 grammes. Apply the lotion with a camel's hair brush to the corn every night for a fortnight. On the fourteenth night soak the foot in hot water for half an hour; then with a bit of clean old linen over the finger, gently work around the sides of the corn and it will come out. Do not cut and dig at the corn with knives and razors which have not been sterilized.

Chilblains are most annoying wrinkle makers. If the chilblains have not broken open but are in the incipient stage, soak them in the hottest water you can endure, and have this temperature raised by adding more boiling water constantly from a tea kettle. In fifteen minutes thrust the feet into ice cold water, wipe gently with a soft towel and bathe with the following lotion: Alum, powdered, 1/2 ounce; spirits of camphor, 1 drachm; cucumber juice, 2 ounces.

Chapped lips can spoil the contour of the entire face, giving it a drawn expression. A pomade guaranteed to cure this ailment is: Cocoa-butter, 10 grammes; castor oil, 3 grammes; oil of birch, 2 drops; extract of cachou, 1 gramme; essence of star-anise, 4 drops. Apply three times daily till a cure is effected.

Chapped hands are extremely painful and should be cared for at once. If you do housework, wear rubber gloves whenever you put your hands in water, or kid gloves when sweeping, cleaning, etc. Use this pomade for the hands, and if the gloves you wear in your work become saturated with it, all the better: Cocoa-butter, 1 ounce; oil of sweet almonds, 1 ounce; oxide of zinc, 1 drachm; borax, 1 drachm; oil of bergamot, 6 drops. Heat the cocoa-butter and oil of almonds in a double boiler, and when thoroughly blended add the zinc and borax; stir as it cools and add the oil of bergamot last.

Styes are very annoying and if they become chronic are apt to draw the muscles of one side of the face, because their victim forces one eye to do most of the work. Avoid spices or stimulating foods, late hours and over-exertion. Directly you feel one gathering take internally one drop tincture of belladonna on a lump of sugar and bathe the eye with warm elder flower water, or apply this pomade: White vaseline, 5 grammes; white precipitate, 10 centigrammes; oil of birch, 10 centigrammes.

Good Form---Letters You Must Write.

LIKE the laws of the Medes and Persians are the rules governing the writing of certain letters between men and women who respect the little niceties of life. To neglect the writing of one of these letters is the height of bad form, and a rudeness for which no apology can be offered.

A gift must be acknowledged within forty-eight hours of its receipt. To wait until you see the giver and then say: "I ought to have written to you, dear, but I knew I'd be seeing you soon," is adding insult to injury. This includes Christmas, birthday and wedding gifts, and books, flowers, etc., not intended for special occasions. The letter of thanks should be distinctly personal and contain, if possible, some reason why the gift is especially appropriate and pleasing. A gracious note of acknowledgment makes a man or woman feel that it is really more blessed to give than to receive.

Wedding presents must be acknowledged by a bride as rapidly as they are received and the duty must not be left until she returns from her honeymoon. In planning for your wedding day do not leave many small matters to be adjusted at the last moment. Allow time each day for acknowledging gifts.

When you receive a formal announcement or are told by members of either family that certain of your mutual friends are engaged, write a note at once, a congratulatory note to the groom and kindly wishes to the bride.

When you have been entertained by a friend, if only for one day and night, on your return home write at once, apprising her of your safe arrival and assuring her of the pleasure her hospitality afforded you.

If you hear of a friend stricken by illness, and you decide to send a few flowers to brighten the sick room, add not your formal card, but a friendly little note expressing your regret at hearing of her affliction and your hope for a speedy recovery.

On the birth of a child in the family where you have been friendly or have often been entertained, it is quite correct to send to mother and father a joint note of congratulation.

If perplexed in matters of Dress, Beauty or Etiquette, write Miss Dean, Miss Morton or Miss Standish, inclosing a self-addressed and stamped envelope for reply. This is a quicker method than having your question answered in the columns of the paper. Besides, you receive a personal, intimate answer. Be careful to address your return envelope accurately. Letters come back to us every day, stamped "insufficient address" or "party cannot be found."

Easter Fare and How to Serve It

The Children Should Have a Breakfast Surprise

A CORRESPONDENT writes as follows:

Why eggs at Easter? Inasmuch as we have been surfeited with eggs and fish for forty days, why not give us a rest from them and a change of diet now that Lent is over and done with (think good-nights) for the year? I foresee that your Easter talk will be of eggs! eggs! eggs! when a fair majority of your readers would be glad not to see another for six months to come. Why not discourse instead of the tedious and savory steam of roast beef and the tender sweetness of spring lamb?

Of course, I know this protest will be of no use. Whatever we, the malcontents, may feel, think and say—and write—the Christian world will go on eating on Easter Sunday, and every breakfast table display eggs in some disguise or undressed on Easter Monday.

Yet, why eggs at Easter—I repeat with agonized emphasis—more than on July 4th, or on Whit Sunday, or on Shrove Tuesday?

MADLINE (Philadelphia).

A woman who is neither so bright, nor so well educated as "Madeline," "supposed" seriously in my hearing, the other day, "that everybody eats eggs at Easter because the hens all over the country begin to lay just then, and eggs are cheap after being so high all winter."

I was reminded—although I kept the reminiscence to myself—of a man who once remarked to me, "How lucky it is that Lent is appointed at a season when fish is plenty and cheap. But, of course, the fellows who set the time—whoever they may be—stand in with the fish merchants and make a good thing out of it!"

He was more or less of a fool, but Madeline has brains, and knows how to put her thoughts into words.

Before entering upon the business of setting our Easter feast in order, let us reason together for a few minutes as to the significance of the Easter egg.

DOWN FROM ANTIQUITY

A noted scholar observes, in connection with the custom among the members of the Greek and Roman Catholic Churches of exchanging gifts of eggs on Easter morning: "The practice of presenting eggs to our friends at Easter is Magian, or Persian." It is, then, of more remote antiquity than is generally supposed. Whatever it may have meant in the far Orient, we find the Jews adopting the Paschal egg as the emblem of the renewed creation of the world in the spring. The Passover Feast fell at the same time as what the Christian Church calls the first Easter. The word "Easter," which occurs in the Book of Acts in King James' version (twelfth chapter, fourth verse), is "Passover" in the Revised Version. The Paschal (Passover) egg of the Hebrew became the symbol to the early Christian of the Resurrection of the crucified Christ. We, who adopt the custom of dyeing Easter eggs, seldom bethink ourselves of the fact that the primitive Christians used but one color in their Easter day offerings, and that red, in allusion to the lifeblood shed on the cross as "a ransom for many."

It was an age of types and symbols. We, living in the clearer light of revealed and established religion, retain some of these, and employ them as illustrations of belief rather than guides to devotion.

Even the staid burghers of our Dutch ancestry, staunchly stubborn in Protestantism, clung to an observance repudiated by their New England brethren as "Popish." Washington Irving tells us that in the reign of godly Peter Stuyvesant there was "a great cracking of eggs at Pass, or Easter." "Pass" was an evident perversion of "Pasch" or "Paschal."

I have answered "Madeline" at greater length than some readers may think expedient, and it may be, more seriously than she expected. The subject is interesting to devout believers in what the crimsoned egg represents, and curious to those who like to trace the origin of faiths and usages we are prone to take for granted.

SYMBOLS OF RESURRECTION

To the ancient Greeks the butterfly was an emblem of the immortal soul springing into new and more beautiful life from the dead chrysalis. The Christians deduced the glorious fact of the resurrection of all the blessed dead from the rising of their Lord. They saw in the broken shell of the egg the symbol of what they incorporated into their Creed: "I believe in the resurrection of the body."

Of this we have a more eloquent and a fuller promise in the return of the flowers after the apparent death of winter. Every blade and bud and blossom has its message of cheer to the waiting heart. "There is no death."

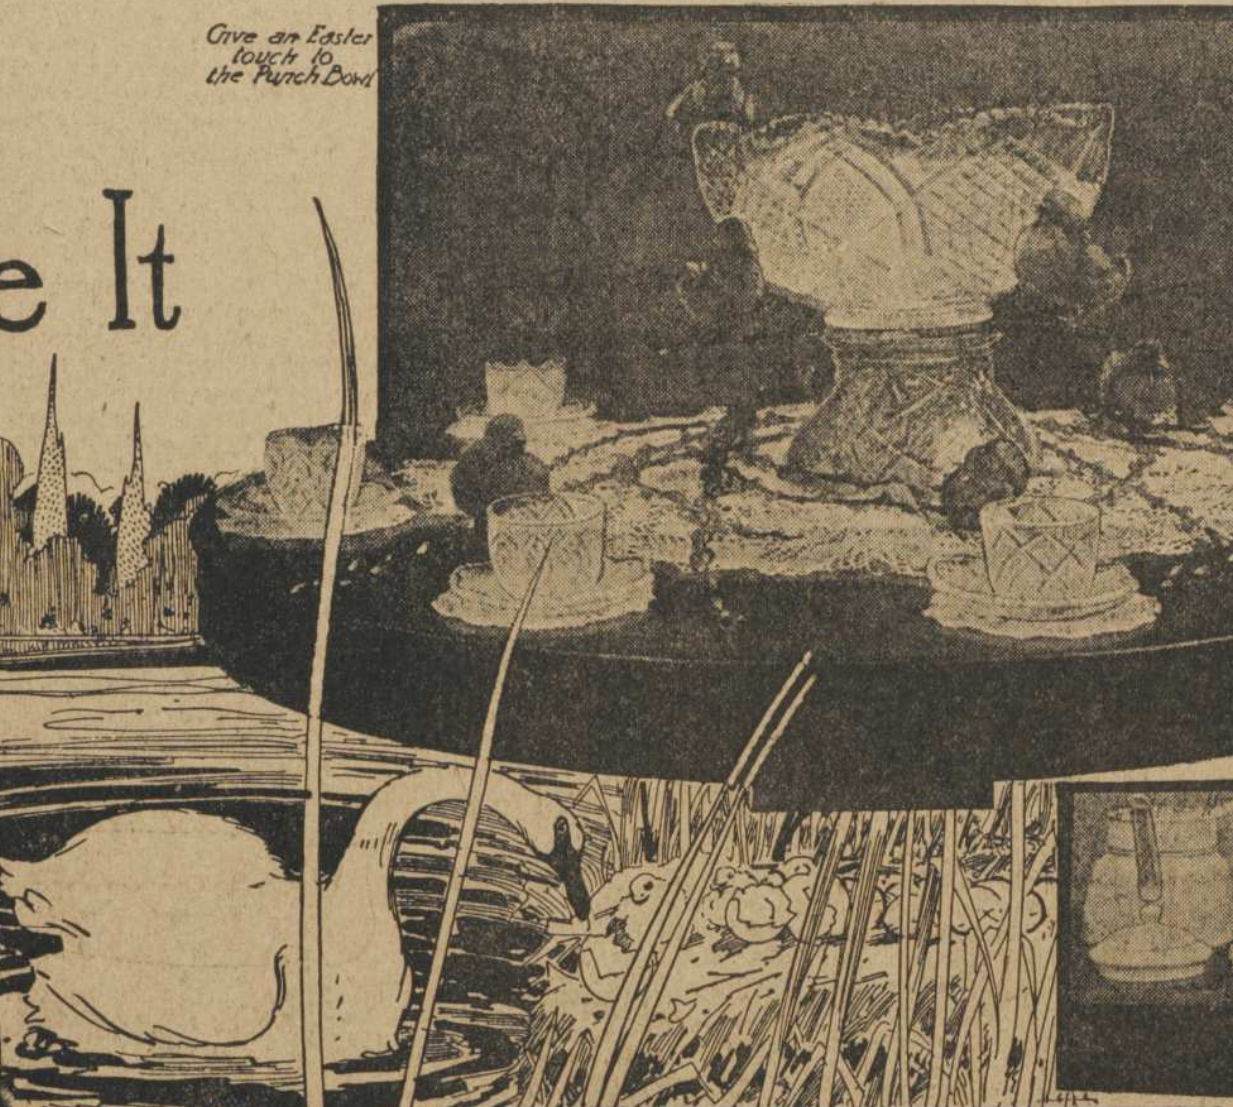

"Schoolgirl" asks: "Why do we make so much of rabbits at Easter? The shop-windows are full of them, and they show up on Easter cards."

Divine reasons are given for the conspicuous part taken by Bunny in our great festival. One is that he bounds gaily to the front, made over as good as new by much sleep underground. According to a German story, the mission of providing Easter eggs for poor children whose parents could not buy them was committed to compassionate rabbits, who, at that season alone, laid eggs of varied hues by the nestful in the fields. Hence the custom that still prevails in some districts of hunting eggs in the meadows and woods on Easter morning.

May I add a word of practical "application" to my Easter sermon? A sermon must have an application, you know.

We hear much of "Easter offerings." If ever our hearts should be moved to thankfulness to the dear Father of us all, and to love of our fellow-men who are—with us—His children, it is at this season of awakening to new life. We look upon a fresh and lovely world—the same we have known and loved so long, yet renewed into beauty that is never old nor tame. Spring is the time of promise and of hope. Let us rejoice and be glad in it. In token of this glad gratitude, let your Easter offering be for those to whom life is less bright than it is to you.

"God scattereth love on every side, Freely among His children all. And always hearts are lying open wide, Wherein some grains may fall."

RECIPES TO PREPARE EASTER DISHES

A Hen's Nest for Breakfast

SIX hard-boiled eggs that have been thrown into ice-cold water as soon as they were boiled, to make the shells slip off easily. Five minutes later, roll each gently on the table, cracking the shell without breaking the egg. Peel off the shells; cut the eggs in half with a sharp knife; (also cut the yolk, rub to a powder and mix with the same quantity of cold chicken or of ham, minced. Make a soft paste by working into the mixture some good gravy; season to taste, and form into balls of the same size and shape as the original yolks. Push into the whites, to resemble whole eggs. Arrange these in the middle of a hot platter; surround with fried potatoes, cut into strips to simulate straw; set the dish in the oven, covered, just long enough to heat the eggs to the heart, and serve; or, you may make the paste, either with or without meat, and roll in a sausage before filling the hollowed whites. It will then take less time to reheat in the oven. In either case, the yolks and gravy must be hot. Pass more gravy with the dish.

An Easter Luncheon Dish

Prepare the hard-boiled eggs as directed in the preceding recipe and make the paste as before, of pounded yolks and chicken, tongue or ham. Have ready and hot a good gravy of chicken. If you have it add a teaspoonful of curry powder, mix with the yolks, heat over the fire and add enough browned flour to make it just thick enough to mould. Stuff the eggs, put the halves neatly together in the right shape and lay upon a bed of rice in a platter. Surround with more rice, to make the "nest"; set in the oven to heat, and serve. Pass with them a bowl of gravy, seasoned with curry. A delicious accompaniment to any preparation of curry is bananae that have been left in the oven until very cold. Serve one to each eater, who strips off the skin and slices it, or bites a bit after each mouthful of hot curry. If you can get short bananae that look (almost) like eggs, the pleasing effect of this dish will be enhanced.

A Duck's Nest

Boil, chill and halve as in preceding recipe. Set the yolks in a bowl, and the bowl, covered, in boiling water at the side of the range. With a thin, keen blade shred the whites into imitation straw, and arrange them in the shape of a nest on a hot platter. Season with salt and white pepper, butter abundantly, cover and set in the oven. Now and then butter again, lest they dry and shrivel.

An Easter Swan's Nest

(Among the Ready's)

Make a quart of blanc manger, and while it is cooling to blood-warm make holes in the small ends of twelve eggs and empty them. As each is emptied hold it under cold water until it is full and lies at the bottom of the bowl. Leave the eggs in the water until all are ready. Pour out the water and dry the shells with a towel. Fill each shell with the blanc manger, and lay them upright in a pan of meat or flour, and let them stay there until Easter. An hour before you wish to serve, them break away the shells carefully and deftly, not to injure the consistency of the blanc manger. Have ready a layer of shredded citron in the bottom of a glass dish. The citron should be too finely cut so as it simulates coarse grass and flags. Heap the eggs upon this layer, make a wall of coarse-spun sugar about them and stick upright in the citron the largest strips of citron you can get out of the candied melon. There are the "reeds."

Dispose them as naturally as possible, keeping the design in mind, and using taste and ingenuity to carry it out. Any housewife who is blessed with a fair share of both may get up the dish to the satisfaction of the family.

An egg and a little of the spun sugar (it may be had from your confectioner), with a "reed" or two, go to each "help." Pass ice cream or plain cream and powdered sugar with the eggs.

You may vary the dish by coloring the blanc manger, dividing it into several portions when first made. Color one with chocolate, another with apricot juice, a third with cochineal, and leave one-fourth white.

The Latest in Household Linens

NO HOUSEWIFE needs to be told that household linen has its fashions, with ever a change. At present white is in great favor, trimmed with very complicated and rich lace. For luncheon the table cloth is out of fashion. A fine Chinese mat is put on the table itself, and before each guest a round or square serviette is laid. These are prettily trimmed or embroidered with colored flowers. For large dinner parties white linen is in greatest favor. The linen is as richly trimmed as possible, with ruffles or Colbert lace. The napkins and table center match the cloth.

For curtains, hung beneath heavy silk or wool, Indian muslin is used. Covered with flounces, it serves as a kind of blind. The flounces are edged with fine silvered ribbon, an effect that is newer than trimmings of flit or lace.

A pretty innovation for sheets, which are more and more richly trimmed, consists of a large band, richly embroidered or trimmed with little flounces of linen and edged with real valenciennes lace. This band, being made of very fine linen and not being washed as often as the sheet itself, is fastened to the sheet by buttons (through which a pretty ribbon is passed, finishing in a dainty bow. Pillow cases are made to match.

HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

Convenient Beverages

PLEASE tell me of something to keep in my rooms at the boarding house to serve as a drink to casual guests. It should be non-intoxicating and, if possible, something to be served cold. Heat is not always obtainable. PERUVIAN (New York).

Why not get the imported ginger ale? It is nice served with biscuits and cheese or with cake.

If you prefer tea or coffee, either is easily made over an alcohol lamp. There are plenty of outlets for this purpose in the shape of lamps, kettles and all the appurtenances of the tea or coffee equipage. With one of these and the chafing dish, the sojourner in a boarding house (often a Sahara) may be comparatively comfortable in the midst of domestic desolation.

Removing Stains

1. Will you kindly advise me how to remove ink stains from a Royal Winton rug? 2. Also, what will remove old laundry stain marks? RUBENBERG (Chicago).

1. Make a paste of buttermilk and starch and cover the spot with it. Leave it on for three days, rinse the place and rub dry. Renew the paste. I have seen ugly ink spots removed from carpets by perseverance in this process.

2. If the marks are on white stuffs, the work is easy. Chlorinated soda, oxalic acid, lemon-and-salt, and half a dozen other detergents would—any of them—do the work. In each case the article treated must be rinsed after each application and laid, while wet, in the sun for some hours.

Wants Recipe for Philadelphia Cake

Please send me the recipe of the Philadelphia cake which was published some weeks ago in your column, also, one for cracker cake. I had the latter, but I loaned it out and it has never returned. Mrs. H. H. (Chicago).

As to the cracker cake, I have no recollection of it. Are you sure it was in our Exchange?

Nor do I recall the Philadelphia Cake by name. Perhaps you mean the recipe for "Lady Baltimore" Cake, which you will find below. The two are sister cities, you know.

Lady Baltimore Cake

One cupful of butter, two of sugar, three-and-a-half cupfuls of flour, one of eggs, milk, the white of six eggs, two level teaspoonsful of baking powder, one teaspoonful of rosewater.

Beat the sugar gradually, beating continuously, adding the sugar as you go on, then the milk and the flour; next the flour, with which the baking powder has been sifted. Lastly, fold in lightly the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs with long horizontal strokes of the beater. Bake in three layers cake tins. The oven should be hot but not too hot for layer cake.

Filling

Dissolve three cupfuls of granulated sugar in one of boiling water. Roll until the syrup "threads" and pour over the stiffened whites of three eggs, stirring constantly.

To this bring add a cupful of chopped raisins and the same of chopped nutmeats. Pecans are best—and the nuts should be cut in strips. Ice the tops and sides of the cake with this after filling it between the layers.

A Warning to Mothers

May I tell some anxious mother, who is worrying over the "naughtiness" of her little one, to examine closely to see if he is as well as he appears to be?

ATTACK ON FATHERS-IN-LAW.

JEROME K. JEROME, at a bachelors' club dinner in New York, said of bachelors:

"No doubt it is the dread of the father-in-law that keeps so many of you young men single. We hear a great deal of the horrid mother-in-law, but the more horrid father-in-law artfully manages to keep in the background. He ought to be dragged out into the limelight of criticism. He ought to be exposed."

"I think the consensus of opinion is that the father-in-law is worse than the mother-in-law. It is because he is dreaded so much, maybe, that no one talks of him."

"I admired the pluck recently of a young fellow who spoke up to his sweet-heart's father. This crusty old gentleman, when the youth asked for the young girl's hand, said with a sneer:

"You want to marry my daughter, do you? Let me tell you that you're not exactly the sort of man I would choose for a son-in-law."

"The youth nodded.

"Well, to be frank," he said, "you're not the sort of man I'd choose for a father-in-law, either. But we needn't chum up, you know, unless we want to."

PATENT PERCH.

"A PATENT perch," said the bird outfitter. "Two dollars. It looks like a genuine twig, and when a bird lights on it it sways like a genuine twig."

"This is a bird's shower bath. Many birds like a shower, as you know. A fine spray ascends from this tube to a height of eight inches, falling back into this porcelain tub. Standing in the tub the bird gets as fine a shower as ever was given by fountain or waterfall."

"These are patent nests. They look like the genuine article. They are very luxurious and springy. They are lined with floss silk."

"And here is our grocery or food department. Here are bird delicacies of every description. Worms, ants, eggs, cuttle fish, breakfast foods, salads, greens, and so on down the list of bird dainties."

"This is our patent medicine department. Here we sell 'plumage revivers,' 'voice clearers,' 'throat strengtheners,' 'bird tonics,' 'bill hardeners.'"

AN ENIGMATIC ANSWER.

A NEWSPAPER writer of New York was praising Mme. Bernhardt.

"She has a great deal of tact and finesse," he said. "When, in an interview, you broach a subject she dislikes, she doesn't come right out and say so, but she makes you such puzzling, such enigmatic answers that, perforce, you shift to another topic."

"I once went to get a very intimate interview with the famous lady. I went to find out what colors she liked best, what food she ate, what wines she drank, what hours she slept, and all that sort of thing."

"She talked freely enough till I came to the food question. That, it was plain, she regarded as too gross a subject for discussion. So, when I opened up with the query, 'And have you a good appetite, madam?' she smiled strangely and answered:

"I sometimes eat more than I do at other times; but never less."

HUMAN NATURE.

MRS. CLARENCE H. MACKAY, at a meeting of the Roslyn School Board, disagreed with a pessimistic opinion that had been expressed.

"To be so unreasonably and so resolutely hopeless is unwise," she said. "It reminds me of an old woman I used to know."

"This old woman was always ill, always ailing. Her various diseases were to her the most interesting topic in the world, and she must have thought them most interesting to others also, for she always talked of them—she talked of nothing else."

"One day I found her eating a hearty meal, and asked her how she was."

"She sighed and answered: 'I feel very well, madam, but I always feel bad when I feel well, because I know I am going to feel worse afterwards.'"

A GENTLE REBUKE.

IRVING GRINNELL, treasurer of the Church Temperance Society of New York, told at a temperance meeting a dramatic story.

"A woman entered a barroom," he said, "and advanced quietly to her husband, who sat drinking with three other men."

"She placed a covered dish on the table and said:

"I feel very well, madam, but I always feel bad when I feel well, because I know I am going to feel worse afterwards."

"The man laughed awkwardly. He invited his friends to share the meal with him. Then he removed the cover from the dish."

"The dish was empty. It contained only a slip of paper that said:

"I hope you will enjoy your supper. It is the same your wife and children have at home."

"And she departed."

AFFIDAVITS FROM EXPERTS.

New York, March 23.—The attorneys for Harry K. Thaw to-day filed answer to the suggestion made by District Attorney Jerome to Justice Fitzgerald that Thaw is mentally incapable of understanding the nature of the proceedings against him, and is a subject for a commission in lunacy rather than for a jury which holds only the power of liberty or death. Supplementing their own unanimous opinion that Thaw does understand the nature of the proceedings against him, and daily advises intelligently with his counsel, the lawyers have filed affidavits from the medical experts employed by the defense and a further affidavit by Mrs. William Thaw, the mother of the defendant. Mrs. Thaw, however, does not address herself to the question immediately at issue. She takes advantage of the opportunity, she declares, to state that in the direct line of descent for four generations there has been no taint of insanity or epilepsy in the prisoner's family. She resents the "malicious misrepresentation and gross exaggeration" on the subject.

Thaw's Letters and Notes.

The principal affidavit made in Thaw's behalf is signed by Delphin M. Delmas, his leading counsel. Mr. Delmas attaches to his personal statement a score or more of letters and notes he has received from Thaw during the progress of the trial. These writings of the defendant, Mr. Delmas declares, clearly indicate his grasp of the proceedings and have contained from time to time valuable suggestions as to the course of the defense. Many of Thaw's notes to Mr. Delmas were addressed to the attorney in court, this method of communication being made necessary by the fact that the attorney, with the beginning of the introduction of testimony, left his place at Thaw's counsel table and moved to a better vantage point inside the railing, where the District Attorney and his assistants had taken up their position.

The affidavits which Thaw's counsel hope will block Mr. Jerome's move for a lunacy commission were filed with the Clerk of the Supreme Court this afternoon and were turned over by him to Justice Fitzgerald, who will announce his decision probably on Wednesday morning next, when the Thaw jury has been ordered to report again. Justice Fitzgerald will indicate the fact to the opposing counsel on Monday if he desires a further hearing on the subject of a commission. Whether or not a commission will be appointed rests solely with Justice Fitzgerald, whose conscience was appealed to by the District Attorney.

Mr. Delmas' Affidavit.

Mr. Delmas, in his affidavit, says: "The professional relations which I have held with the defendant since the beginning of the trial until the present time, the many interviews I have had with him during that period, the many communications I have sent to him and received from him, coupled with my experience at the bar, enable me to form an opinion of the capacity of Harry K. Thaw as regards his understanding of the proceedings against him and power to make his defense. "And I do, upon my oath, solemnly state that during all the time of his trial, Harry K. Thaw has been, and is, capable of understanding the nature and object of the proceedings against him; of comprehending his own condition in reference to such proceedings and of conducting his defense in a rational manner, and that during the whole of the trial he has understood the nature and object of such proceedings, has comprehended his own condition in reference thereto, and has conducted his defense in a rational manner."

The chief exhibit elicited by Mr. Delmas is the note from Thaw appointing him chief counsel the second day of the defense. It will be remembered the first day of Thaw's defense was decidedly disastrous to his case. Mr. Delmas declared that Thaw wrote to him as follows:

"Dear Mr. Delmas: On the 6th of this month, at the request of my then senior counsel with all other counsel concurring and on my own motion, I appointed you my chief counsel to conduct and manage the present trial before Justice Fitzgerald, in accordance with your own views and plans, giving you full authority in the matter. I wish to-day to reiterate and confirm everything that was then done in these premises and to tell you that no one but you has any right or any authority to make any agreement or stipulation in any manner relating to the conduct of the trial or to take any unauthorized stand therein. Very sincerely yours, H. K. THAW."

The Beckwith Testimony.

With reference to the proposed testimony of the artist, Carroll Beckwith, Thaw wrote to Mr. Delmas: "I insist that my counsel produce Mr. Beckwith to testify regarding what he told me in the fall of 1903, in 1904, '05 and '06 concerning Mrs. H. K. Thaw's character and goodness in the year 1901 and the change that occurred in the fall of 1901 after the meeting of Mr. White." Under date of February 6 Thaw wrote Mr. Delmas as follows:

"Not as principal, but as husband, I must hear your notes for my wife's testimony, as I shall permit nothing but the truth and wish to prevent any unintentional misrepresentation. To-day a witness, not the stage doorkeeper, who I was pleased to hear stand straight and safe on facts, perjured himself in a very natural or studied manner. This grieves me and forces me to insist upon my right as a husband if not upon that deference due to my wishes as principal." Another note of the same date says: "Mr. Cornstock comes after my wife, I presume. Will she testify Friday or Five Pages of Questions.

In one of his letters to Mr. Delmas, Thaw enclosed five pages of questions which he declared Anthony Comstock might answer as to Thaw's work with him. Thaw also refers to a letter in the possession of one of his counsel, Mr. Gleason, which he says originated either July 6 or 7 "while I still may have been frustrated."

Richard Worthington, of Baltimore, Thaw declared, could prove the date of the letter. Thaw also desired President Patton, of Princeton Theological Seminary, to be called as a witness with regard to letters Thaw had written to him. One of Thaw's notes handed to Mr. Delmas in court read:

"Do not permit Jerome before the jury to ask 'when and how he shot S. W.' This is neither in fact nor in evidence."

Another was as follows:

"I am informed that in the last twenty thousand cases detained in the Tombs not one has suffered from his wife being subpoenaed, except to testify in the trial. To counteract the effect of Jerome's libelous arguments it may be well to force my letters to J. D. Lyon after June 25 into evidence. They explained the blackening, etc."

Gleason's Affidavit.

Attorney Gleason in his affidavit declares Thaw's memory to be wonderfully accurate. In his investigations of matters reaching over a number of years he has always found Thaw's statements as to facts to be correct. Henry C. McKee, of counsel, declares that Thaw throughout the trial has been treated as a man in possession of a rational and healthy intellect and without any suspicion or doubt as to his entire mental responsibility.

Clifford W. Hartridge and A. Russell Peabody complete the list of counsel who file affidavits. The affidavits declare Thaw capable of understanding the proceedings against him as they are conducted. The affidavits also declare Thaw capable of understanding the proceedings against him as they are conducted. The affidavits also declare Thaw capable of understanding the proceedings against him as they are conducted.

The move by the prosecution for an inquiry into the advisability of a lunacy commission for my son, Harry K. Thaw, affords me the opportunity of making a statement of the facts in relation to the alleged insanity, epilepsy and mania, stripped of all verbiage, which has been made public in the last few days.

First, I wish to emphasize the fact that in the direct line of descent for four generations, if we go back to the beginning of the world, there is no trace of other epilepsy or insanity.

PROFESSIONAL BONDSMEN.

[From Broadway Magazine for February] In the trail of the police court lawyer as a matter of necessity comes the professional bondsmen. One of the two lawyers and a magistrate composed the famous Pickle Trust. A large batch of women would be gathered in the police court for the sake of plunder. These women have been known to be gathered in the police court for the sake of plunder.

There the Pickle Trust got hold of them. The magistrate would hold up his hands in horror over the spectacle before him. He would declare that he would clear the streets and make them respectable. He would put the women under bonds for good behavior.

The law gives him the right to detain them until he is satisfied with a bondsman. He would look them up and then their satellites would surround for a bondsman. One would be produced, and all rejected. Finally the mysterious bill would be passed around that a certain man must be hired. His fee was per cent on the bond, $30 for a $500 bond, and so on.

Most of the women would be put under $500 bonds. If there were twenty of them the Trust would have $10,000 to divide pretty good picking for a morning's work. The Trust would have $10,000 to divide pretty good picking for a morning's work.

Jeffersonville Citizens Want City Cleaned Up.

THE TREASURY EMPTY—TRASH BREEDS DISEASE GERMS.

BLINDED BY DUST PEOPLE COMPLAIN AGAINST CONDITIONS.

IMMEDIATE RELIEF WANTED.

With a treasury practically depleted on account of the many salaries that have to be paid under the act of 1905, the sanitary condition of Jeffersonville has become alarming because no funds are in sight to be used in cleaning the city. Conditions have reached such a point that Dr. W. M. Varble, secretary of the County Board of Health, was appealed to yesterday and asked if he could not assert his authority in ordering something done. He said he was not familiar enough with the law to give an immediate answer, but would give the question his earliest consideration. It is asserted that the City Board of Health makes no effort to change conditions, and unless something is done the people of the city are in danger of an epidemic of typhoid fever.

As the people walked the streets yesterday afternoon, blinded by dust, there were many expressions heard against the present state of affairs. Suggestions were repeatedly heard of calling a mass-meeting of the people to see if something could not be accomplished through that channel. No attempt is made to deny that the unsanitary condition of Jeffersonville is in the most deplorable state ever known.

Spring street, the main business thoroughfare, is paved with vitrified brick and has granite sidewalks. The gutters are full of filth and many of the alleys are nauseating to look upon. Back yards are full of trash that has accumulated during the winter, and is full of disease germs. The gutters are full of filth and many of the alleys are nauseating to look upon.

PARENTS FINED.

Held Responsible For Delinquency of Children.

NEW EXPERIENCE IN NEW ALBANY JUVENILE COURT.

THREE SUITS FOR DIVORCE FILED—TWO GRANTED.

DEFENDANT URGES SOLVENCY.

Parents who had failed to comply with the compulsory education law of Indiana, by requiring their children to attend school, had a new experience in the Juvenile Court in New Albany yesterday, several of them having been fined by Judge W. C. Utz, while others were reprimanded. In addition, there were a number of boys and girls present to answer for truancy and other juvenile delinquencies. They were given reprimands and warned that if they offended again the results would be unpleasant.

Lockett Roberts, father of Elmer and Ernest Roberts, failed to compel his sons to attend school and was fined $5. Mrs. Pleditch, mother of a similar offense, had a fine of $5 imposed, and upon her refusal to pay the fine she was sent to the county jail, where she remained nearly an hour before her husband came to her rescue and settled. Mrs. Dorothy Hurdle was also charged with violation of the law in not requiring her children to attend school regularly, and was fined $5. She paid the fine. Henry Moyer, father of Henry Moyer, Jr., was a little careless about requiring his boy to attend school, and he was fined $5, which the Judge suspended for two weeks, and in the meantime the boy will be under the observation of the probation officer. Should he attend school regularly, his father will not be compelled to pay the fine.

Paul Graham, aged fourteen years, charged with petit larceny, was sentenced to the Bedford School, and a sentence was held up pending good behavior. Arthur Lucke, another boy charged with petit larceny, was taken under advisement until next Saturday. William McQueen failed to require his son Otto to attend school, and was fined $5. The court was lenient with his contention, however, but let him off with a reprimand and a warning.

THREE SUITS FOR DIVORCE Filed in Floyd Circuit Court—Two Divorces Granted. The Floyd Circuit Court was in session in New Albany yesterday and the principal business transacted appeared to be in connection with suits for divorce. Mary Baker applied for a legal separation from Frederick Baker, alleging as grounds for the action desertion and failure to provide. She also alleged in her complaint that the defendant was convicted of embezzlement in Arkansas. They were married April 18, 1904, and separated August 15, 1906, which was the averment of the defendant.

Virgie Vanha applied for a divorce from Charles Vanha, alleging cruel treatment as the cause of the action. In her complaint she avers that he had made a practice of beating her, had applied violence to her person, and had made her miserable and unhappy. She alleges that he earns $75 a month, has $250 in real estate, and an annual income of $1,000. She claims to have $100 alimony together with custody of their child.

A third suit was that of Della Underhill against Frank Underhill. The plaintiff asked for a divorce on the grounds of cruel treatment and failure to provide and support. She alleged that she was married to the defendant on June 15, 1902, and separated in October, 1906. Two divorces were decreed by Judge Utz. Ora May McDaniels was granted a divorce from Willie McDaniels, cruel treatment having been proved. Harvey C. Stamper was given a legal separation from Penelope Stamper, on proof of desertion.

The case of Julia and Thomas Hatfield against the United Gas and Electric Company was transferred on change of venue to the Circuit Court on application of the defendant company. This is a suit in which Julia Hatfield seeks to obtain damages for personal injuries while Thomas Hatfield, her husband, seeks to recover for the loss of his wife's services on account of her injuries.

Defendant Asserts No Bankruptcy. Last week an application of involuntary bankruptcy was filed by George B. Cardwell, deputy clerk of the United States Court at New Albany, against N. C. Zinsmeister and E. B. Richardson & Company, asking that Bin B. McCree, of Harbington, Ind., be declared a bankrupt. The plaintiff alleged that the defendants had committed an act of bankruptcy by filing a general assignment in the State courts.

McCree filed yesterday in the United States Court at Indianapolis, where the case had been taken, a statement denying that he had committed the act of bankruptcy and averred that he should not be declared a bankrupt for any cause so said petition. He further stated that he desired the case to be inquired into by a jury. He had been conducting a general store at Harbington, Ind., and the petitioners averred that he was indebted to them in the sum of more than $600. The case was represented by Stoenburg & Weather, of New Albany, while McCree was represented by the firm of Hotell, Caudill & Hotell, of Salem, and J. R. Duffin, of Louisville.

Reads Not Guilty of Murder. In Magistrate Fogle's court at New Albany yesterday Shelby Walker filed an affidavit charging Xenia Young, colored, with the murder of William Walker, colored. The defendant was arraigned in the magistrate's court, entered a plea of not guilty and the preliminary hearing was set for April 1. The affidavit charged murder in the first degree. The woman is accused of shooting the man with a revolver at her home, 132 West Oak street, New Albany, Wednesday night, his death occurring in the hospital. She claims to have acted in self-defense and has retained Stoenburg & Weather as her attorneys. The case was set for trial yesterday afternoon.

Clean-Up Order Issued. At the meeting of the Board of Public Works at New Albany yesterday morning a resolution was adopted requiring the police department to clean up the city streets by removing all refuse, garbage and ashes in separate receptacles. It was further ordered that all persons who persist in throwing refuse and ashes on the streets and alleys or who fail to provide separate boxes for them shall be prosecuted.

The board also adopted a resolution to notify the United Gas and Electric Company that after May 1 the city will not be responsible for payment for lighting the market house between State and West First streets. The City Clerk was directed to notify the butchers, gardeners and hucksters occupying the stalls in the market house that they will be expected to pay for the lighting after the date mentioned.

What Twenty-five Years of Ball Playing Will Do For a Catcher's Hand.

THIRTY-SIX broken and twisted bones in one hand is the secret disclosed in the life of James McGuire, says a special from Atlanta. Mr. Nye, official photographer and examiner of prisoners for the United States Government at the Federal prison here, presented the veteran catcher with an X-ray picture of his right hand. What McGuire thought was a trifling accident twenty-four hours ago developed into something very much more substantial in the way of pain, and it will be more than two weeks before the grand old man of the game can play baseball again. A swiftly-thrown ball struck him on the heel of his right hand during practice. The old man felt a deadening pain for awhile, but thought nothing more of it until he awoke to find his entire arm stiff and sore. A doctor was called, and he diagnosed the trouble as displaced ligaments. He thought it serious. To ascertain the exact nature of the trouble, Mr. McGuire was taken out to the Federal prison and there was photographed just the same as if he had been a noted criminal. The X-ray was turned on his right arm and wrist, but it was found that no bones were broken. But that was not the story. Mr. Nye came in early this morning with a large photograph of the bones in McGuire's hand, and presented the freakish picture to the club. He said it was the most remarkable hand ever seen under the camera. From scientific interest several doctors gathered around and said they couldn't understand how it was possible for a man to keep playing ball and remain strong and sturdy under the terrific shocks to his hand. The X-ray photograph shows thirty-six broken places in the bones of the fingers and huge knots resembling gnarled places on an old oak tree are clustered around every joint. The bones in the small finger were knitted and wrapped in the shape of an inverted lot-

MANAGERS DO FUNNY THINGS

Big League Leaders Act
Queerly During Exciting Games.

HOW GREAT STARS PERFORM.

Lajoie Is Cool, Connie Mack Only Smiles, While Fielder Jones, of Chicago, Hotfoot.

GRIFFITH DOES ROAD WORK.

FEW of the fans who sit in the grand stand and bleachers and enjoy a ball game during a hot summer afternoon realize how the manager who sits on the bench feels and acts. It's great to be the manager of a winning team, but it's hard to imagine anything worse than the leader of a tail-end aggregation.

If you happen to be the manager of a team that wins the pennant the fans will insist that you're one of the wisest guys in the business, that you understand how to handle a bunch of players, that it was your inside work that landed the rag, and that in general you're the whole explosion. On the other hand, if you happen to be piloting the cellar champions you will be told time and time again that you're a lobster and should be digging ditches, that your place is in the tall bushes and the green grass, that you couldn't win a pennant if your team was made up of Lajoie and Wagners.

The men who sit on the bench and guide the destinies of the big league teams earn all the money they are pulling down. The manager has to direct the play, take the abuse resulting from all the mistakes made by the players, explain every defeat, and do all the worrying for the entire bunch. Every manager has his peculiarities, his superstitions and his hobbies. It's really interesting to watch how the various leaders of the American and National League teams act during the progress of the game. It is generally possible to tell just how the game is going by watching the expressions and notions of the moule.

Take Fielder Jones, of the White Sox, for instance, the winner of the American League pennant and world's championship. During a game Jones is all the time serious. He sees nothing funny. While in the outfield he paces around in center field like a caged lion. The umpires insist that Jones has a path worn on every ground from center field to the plate, due to his coming in to dispute all the decisions. Any time a pitcher looks as if he was about to go up Jones is on the spot offering his advice. He remains on the bench very little during the game. In direct contrast to Fielder Jones is Connie Mack, of the Athletics, the winner of the American League pennant in 1906. Mack directs the play from the bench, and is always sitting in street clothes. He rarely says anything, and then only in the ordinary tones. He is the "fox" of the business, and when the game is going his way he always wears one of those overlying eyes. When a break against him his face seems twice as long as usual, and that's going some for Mack. He is a good loser, however, and takes defeat as gracefully as he does victory.

Clark Griffith wears out more shoes during the season than all the other managers put together. For he covers all kinds of ground. Griffith seldom is on the bench. He is generally doing stunts on the coaching lines, and never lets an opportunity go by to question a decision. He thinks there is something to be gained. Griffith is of an unusually nervous temperament, and every year he is scheduled for a nervous collapse. Last year report had it that Griffith exhibited on one of the raw eggs during the last month of the race.

Manager McCloskey, of the St. Louis Cardinals, who by the way, has gained much fame this year by losing a signed statement that he didn't expect to lose the pennant, is one of the peculiar characters of the league. He has been McCloskey's misfortune to manage more tail-end teams than any other man in the game. Perhaps there is a method in his madness when he announced that he didn't expect to win. McCloskey delights in cursing, and it's a great treat to listen to the conversation he holds with himself. He has a habit of moving from one end of the bench to the other when an opposing team starts to pile up a bunch of runs. Thus it can be seen how McCloskey leads the league in wearing out trousers.

In order to tell the score of a game in which the St. Louis Browns are playing one has only to take a trip to Jimmy McAleer's hat and the position of the visor. If the Browns are in the lead the hat is tipped a trifle to the rear and the visor is in a careless fashion. When the Browns are up against it or in the rear McAleer always has his hat face the front, and sometimes has his face buried in his hands as if in deep study.

Bill Armour, who at one time managed Cleveland and Detroit, in the American League, but who will be with Chicago this year, is much after the style of McAleer. His hat always played a prominent part, and with the score a few inches away from his face. Armour was always found standing. A more superstitious man than Armour never lived, and nothing can happen but he has a reason and result for it.

As a ball player Chick Stahl was one of those easy-going chaps, always wearing a smile and taking life easy. Whether the work of a managerial position will have anything to do with Chick's make-up is a matter of time, but it's pretty good betting that the smile will be missing many a day this year.

Napoleon Lajoie is a man of action and a few words. Larry gets into arguments, gives his commands in an authoritative way, and they are always heeded. He watches the play from the bench, and during an exciting inning his face is a study.

"Sluggo" McGraw is one of the few managers in the big league whose motto is "win, no matter how it's done." McGraw relies mainly on his bulldozing tactics for success. Since Harry Pulliam took charge of the National League and the umpires got wise to McGraw, his star has considerably dimmed. In order to regain lost ground he must win the pennant in the National League this year, and the odds are all against him.

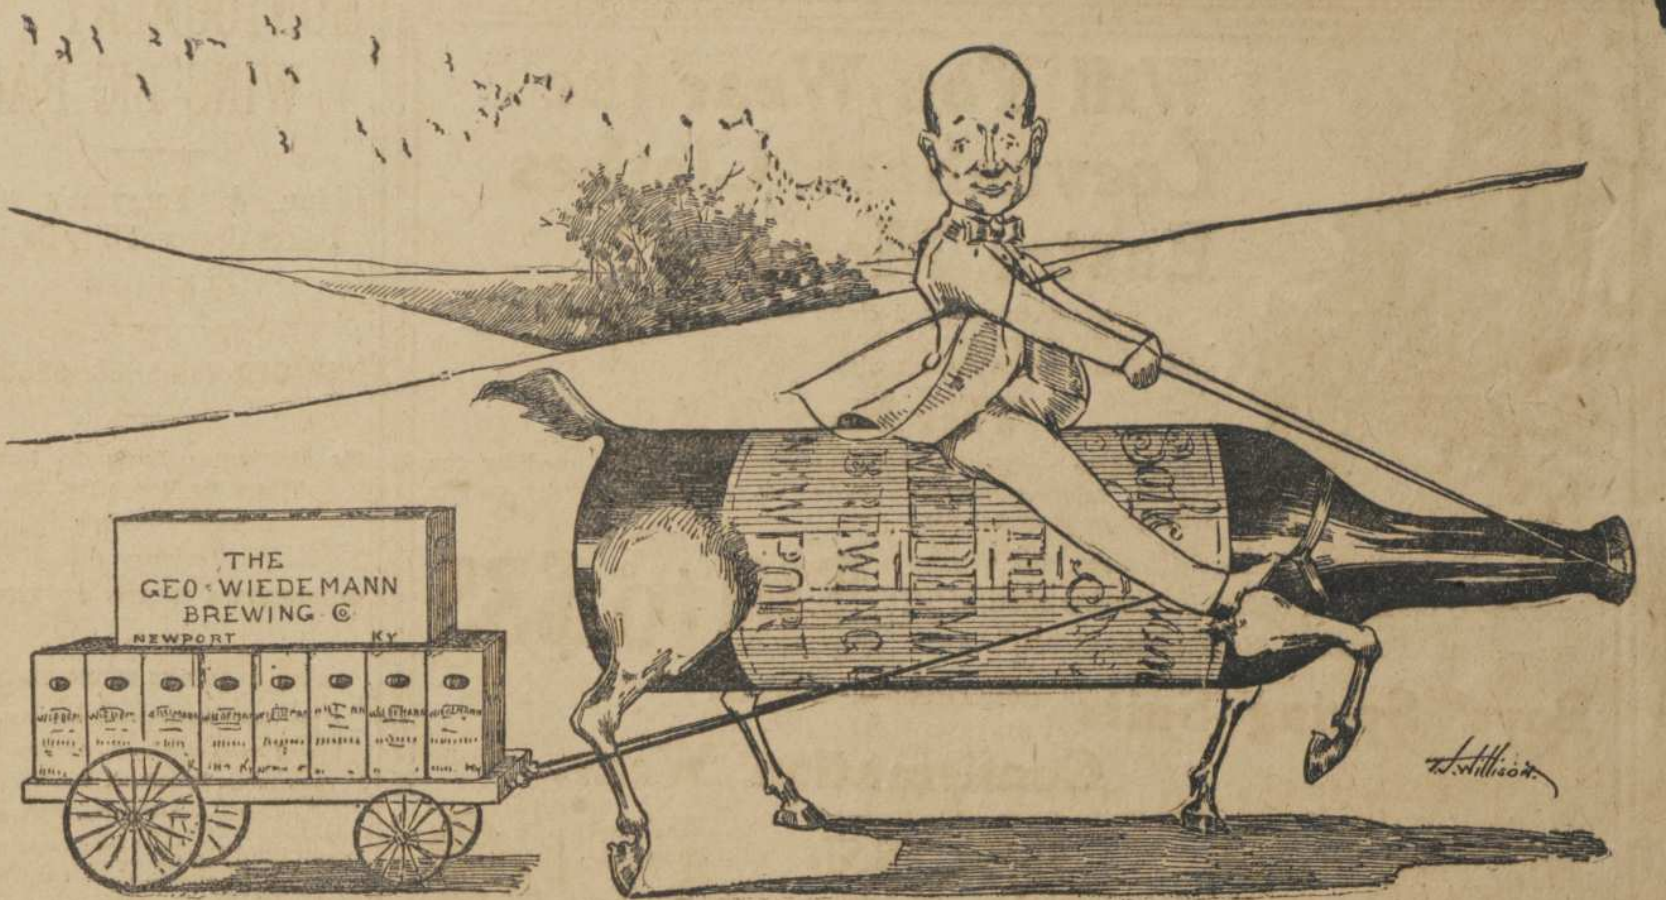

Frank Chance is the man with the smile. In victory or defeat Chance always looks happy, but the size of the smile is the very best indication of the result. If it covers the face the Cubs have won it. If it is just a sickly smile then something has happened.

Billy Murray, the new manager of the Phillies, who was with Jersey City last year, is much after the style of Connie Mack. He is of a quiet disposition, but little to say and a rather odd face that is considerably brightened by victory. Murray, however, always has something to say and carry when he talks.

A peculiar characteristic of all the big league managers, especially those in the American League, is to get thin. There wasn't a mogul in the league who didn't drop from ten to thirty pounds during the season of 1906. Jimmy McAleer was the heaviest loser as to yards. McAleer was in poor health all season, while his trouble did the rest.

HAD the Boston club not refused to waive claim to Ewing, the Cincinnati pitcher, he would have been traded to the Boston Americans for Tannehill. The latter wanted to play in Cincinnati, which is his home.

ter J. In several of the joints, instead of fitting in the sockets regularly, the balls on the ends of the bones are flattened and set on one side. So remarkable was this condition that the majority of the doctors had copies made of the X-ray photograph for future reference. Guire explained that most of the injuries shown in the photograph were received during the old days when catchers wore no mitts.

NEW YORK—Simply a question of whether the team can pick up its 1905 form. Material is there, if the players can come up to top speed. Very strong in the box and behind the bat. Outfield collectively is the best in the league. Should be in the fight from start to finish.

BROOKLYN—Likely to be a harder team to beat than last year because of a season's experience together. Pitchers, average. Infield and outfield strong in spots. Bergen a skillful catcher and one of the most expert throwers behind the bat. Base-running strength somewhat scattered.

CHICAGO—Main point is ability of team to repeat its 1906 performance. Natural strength as good as it was last season. Pitchers of highest quality, base running skillful and speedy, and general team work of best standard. Excellent behind the bat, and, barring accident, a consistent pace-maker.

PITTSBURG—A problem. One of the uncertainties of the summer. May develop into a championship factor later in the season, if not at the start. Pitchers a trifle uncertain and catchers not above average. Likely to be a free-hitting team, making runs in bunches with a good start against a pitcher.

Old Arguments of the Game.

One of the many indications that the baseball season is nearly upon us is the revival of many old and new arguments concerning the national game. New York "fans" feel that they have been slighted in the rating of some of the men who wear New York uniforms by critics in other cities. Tim Murnane, the veteran player, now baseball critic of the Boston Globe, is the author of a widely-circulated article in which "Jiggs" Donohue, of Chicago, is declared to be a better first baseman than Hal Chase. This was disputed by many other experts. Here in New York we have Chase to be the best ever, says a writer of the metropolis.

More recently Mr. Murnane dilated at length on the merits of American League shortstops. He claimed Terry Turner, of the Cleveland team, above Norman Elberfeld, of the New Yorks. We are inclined to resent this second night, with due respect to Mr. Murnane's judgment and experience. As all "fans" know, PHILADELPHIA—Another guess. Looks like a better infield and a probably stronger pitching staff. Would not be strange if Murray, the new manager, got better results than his predecessor. Scant strength in run-getting ability, but a "blugging" team if it gets away well. Likely to win more than half its games.

CINCINNATI—Possibly the most experimental nine in the league. Mostly constituted of young players, who have shown snap and steam. Infield fast, a conundrum as to batting, and not very much on base-running. Outfield purely conjecture. Pitchers uncertain. Very good behind the bat.

BOSTON—About one-fifth better than last season. Infield improved, outfield good in batting, fair in fielding. Pitchers intermittently strong. When at their best hard to beat. Average strength behind the bat, and a nine in which there will certainly be a better spirit at beginning of the season.

ST. LOUIS—Capital bunch of young pitchers. Strong, well-built chaps, who need seasoning and good coaching. Doubtful infield and fast outfield. Doesn't look like a heavy-hitting team. Only average behind bat, and collectively the nine will be an uncertain quantity for good or bad until a month has steadied it down.

Turner is a wonderful fielder. Up on Washington Heights last summer Turner made some remarkable stops and throws, and in the final struggle for the pennant his great work beat the Yankees in two games at Cleveland.

While admitting Turner's ability, Clark Griffith declares that Elberfeld is a better shortstop, because he is of more value to his team than Turner, except perhaps in fielding. "At that," says Griffith, "Elberfeld makes dazzling plays. He may not make them look so hard, but he can cover as much territory as Turner. And you must bear in mind that Elberfeld has been greatly handicapped by injuries to his legs. He is a better hitter than Turner, and just as good a base runner. "But where he shines is in directing plays. He is a quick thinker. I never have to tell him what to do. He works harder and is a harder loser than Turner. He is a leader, while Turner is a brilliant individual player. Turner is a more accurate thrower, but he is young, while Elberfeld is now classed as a veteran. When Elberfeld was Turner's age he was the equal, if not the superior, of the Turner of to-day in his fielding."

WHOLESALE Dry Goods and Carpets.

Cincinnati is conceded by all well-posted merchants to be the lowest-priced Dry Goods market in the United States. The Alms & Doepke Wholesale, with the new addition that has been added, is nearly again as large as it was before, extending from Canal to Hunt and from Main to Sycamore streets, a distance of 400 feet, with lofty ceilings and abundance of light on all sides, creating the brightest and most attractive Wholesale Salesrooms that can be built.

Alms & Doepke's Wholesale Departments are at all times filled with the choicest, scarcest and most up-to-date merchandise obtainable, at uniform low prices (which are always lowest), embracing many articles which at the present time, on account of the extreme scarcity prevailing on all kinds of cotton, linen, silk and wool goods, as well as all other lines of merchandise, cannot be found elsewhere.

All Dry Goods, Carpet, Notion and Millinery Dealers are invited to pay us a visit of inspection before purchasing elsewhere.

TO FOLLOW SUGGESTION OF AMERICAN DELEGATE

MR. STEAD'S ADVICE TO THE HAGUE CONFERENCE.

EDITOR COMING TO CARNEGIE INSTITUTE INAUGURAL.

EXPECTS TO SEE PRESIDENT.

London, March 23.—W. T. Stead, the English editor, will sail on the steamer Caronia on March 26 for New York to attend the inauguration of the Carnegie Institute at Pittsburgh, April 11, and the National Arbitration and Peace Congress at New York, April 14. Mr. Stead recently made a tour of the capitals of Europe in the interest of bringing up the question of national disarmament at The Hague peace conference, and during his stay in America expects to see President Roosevelt and other prominent men and to ascertain their views regarding the question.

In an interview to-day Mr. Stead expressed the hope that America would further the principle which he declares an American delegate brought before The Hague convention of 1889. Mr. Stead referred to a recommendation which was unanimously adopted, made by the late F. W. Halls, who proposed that when two powers have a dispute which they are unable to adjust by the ordinary means of diplomacy that they call in mediators who would be allowed thirty days in which to endeavor to avert war.

As to disarmament, Mr. Stead said he did not expect anything more than an educational result from the discussion of this question at the coming convention.

JOINT MOVEMENT FOR PACIFICATION

SECRETARY ROOT TELLS OF THE EFFORTS.

TO ESTABLISH PEACE IN TURBULENT CENTRAL AMERICA.

INTERNATIONAL SIGNIFICANCE.

Washington, March 23.—"I propose a toast to the peace which Mexico and the United States are endeavoring to establish in Central America, and ever-lasting peace between Mexico and the United States."

This statement, spoken by Secretary Root at the dinner given last night by the Mexican Ambassador and Mrs. Root, set at rest all doubt as to the joint movement for pacification which the two neighboring republics have initiated and showed how close the relations between Mexico and the United States have become.

Mr. Root's toast followed toasts proposed by Mr. Creel to the President of the United States and Mexico, and to the American Secretary of State.

The sentiment suggested by the Secretary of State was received with great enthusiasm by the Mexican Ambassador's guests and the small dinner party became an affair of international significance.

FOR NEW TRIAL.

DR. J. H. FEIST OF NASHVILLE,
MAKES MOTION.

Sentiment Against Man Convicted of Murder Plainly Shown in the Court Room.

Nashville, Tenn., March 23.—(Special.)—Dr. J. H. Feist was again before Judge W. M. Hart in the Criminal Court to-day when the motion for a new trial, taken up last week, was resumed. Dr. Feist was showing plainly the effect of imprisonment. For much of the day the court room was packed, and the sentiment against the defendant was shown by demonstrations.

The day was devoted to rebuttal testimony offered by the State, the members of the jury being on the stand with reference to statements as to the quantity of whiskey furnished the jury during the trial of several weeks. All the members stated that not more than one quart bottle was furnished daily, and that six to ten days none was furnished.

The testimony of Juror Carter as to statements alleged to have been made by him bordered on the sensational. There were several affidavits that he had made statements that Feist ought to have been hanged, and these he denied. Mr. McConnell asked Carter why these affidavits would have made false statements, and the witness said he had heard that Attorney McConnell had threatened to have an affidavit before the court if he did not make some kind of statement. Mr. McConnell was on his feet instantly and stated that Juror Carter gave his affidavit.

ROOT MAY OUTLINE
NEW FOREIGN POLICY.

Expected To Speak At Conciliation
Committee Meeting.

Washington, March 23.—Speaker Cannon, Director Barrett, of the Bureau of American Republics, Gov. Guild, of Massachusetts, and many other prominent men will be guests of the Worcester Board of Trade at its annual dinner on April 25. Secretary Root and Mr. Barrett also will attend the meeting of the International Conciliation Committee in New York City April 15 to 19, and both will make addresses.

It is believed that Secretary Root at that time may forecast the attitude of this Government at The Hague conference to be held in June. A further explanation of this country's attitude toward the Latin-American countries also is expected from Secretary Root.

FALL ON ROLLER SKATES
RESULTS IN BOY'S DEATH.

Joseph Pallast, thirteen-year-old son of Theodore Pallast, 513 Hancock street, died Friday afternoon from the effects of injuries he sustained by falling while skating on the sidewalk Wednesday afternoon. The funeral services will be held at 9 o'clock this morning at St. Boniface's church. The burial will be in St. Stephen's cemetery.

The little fellow was skating along the sidewalk when he struck an obstacle and was pitched to the ground. He threw up his arm to protect himself, but he fell so hard that his arm broke, and his head struck the pavement, resulting in concussion of the brain. He was carried unconscious to the house where he received medical attention. Everything possible was done to save the lad, but he never rallied, and sank gradually until the end came Friday afternoon.

Creek and Seminole Nations, Indian Territory

SECTION OF THE NEW
KANSAS CITY, LAWTON AND PACIFIC RAILWAY.

This is a correct Map of part of the line. Cut it out with reading matter below and preserve.

THIS IS THE AGE OF OPPORTUNITY.

Our national character is fast shaping its whole structure to the plan of the "Square Deal." The spirit of our age has not in its design a single wavering line of surrender to resistance. Expanding human energy and multiplied human accomplishment have driven the race to the point where obstacles are but a spur to achievement, where difficulty is but a goal to effort.

The horse is not born into the world with steel shoes, hence the blacksmith; the shaft is not ready sunk by nature to her beds of ore, hence the miner; the grain is not garnered in the bins by the autumn breeze and the clear skies, hence the husbandman and the reaper; the cloth for your garment is not plucked from the cotton boll nor the cocoon of the silk worm and draped upon your form, hence the spinner and weaver.

Men of energy, men of brains, men of courage, are searching throughout all nature's fastnesses and in the labyrinth of commercial concern for opportunities for development and capital is waiting the moment of their results.

Weigh these men, try their plans in the scale of your judgment, size them up by the measure of your knowledge and your experience. Riches, and all that riches can mean, is at the end of your action.

Do you intend to make the fortune in store for you with your hands or with your brain? Begin thinking to-day and to-morrow you may work less. Creative enterprises have made ALL of the vast fortunes known to-day. Enterprises based upon the expanding population, the initiative faculty, the creative genius of the American people build their earnings day by day and month by month. Their harvest time is always. Their future is not in the past, it is in front of them.

Bind your future to men of judgment, men of energy, men of honest purpose. Men who possess these qualities have them by nature, hence it is natural for their whole effort to follow these lines. On the banners of these men you will find inscribed the legend, "A SQUARE DEAL."

This kind of men have moved mountains and have driven back the waters of the sea; the whole animus of their being is to build up; the constructive forces of nature are a part of them.

"One good investment is worth a lifetime of labor."

It may be serviceable to note in this connection that we are able to offer an investment the worth and integrity of which are based upon purely creative lines.
